The McBurney Point

Are Women Brave?

Death by Drink

Death by Fire

By Arthur Brisbane

MR. BARNES, head of the United States Chamber of Commerce, tells President Hoover that he thinks Congress should be most cautious in these "sensitive times." No extra session. The less of Congress, the better for the nation, is a widespread conservative opinion.

On the other hand, every surgeon will tell Mr. Barnes that when there is great SENSITIVENESS, there is often a need of a major operation.

If your McBurney point, low down on the right hand side of your abdomen, is sensitive, your appendix should come out.

In "these sensitive times," perhaps, this country needs some major operation. Who will attend to it, if not Congress? It may be a poor thing, but it's all we have.

Gentlemen with big necks used to say women should not vote until they became as brave as men.

They vote now, and have always been much braver than men. Consider, for instance, Miss Winifred Spooner, English, 23 years old, flying from London to South Africa, attempting to make the trip in five days.

Her plane was forced down on the Mediterranean at midnight two miles from shore. Miss Spooner and her flying companion, who was not a good swimmer, were both injured. This did not keep the young English girl from swimming two miles to the shore through the darkness, seeking help for her companion.

A well-known man, formerly head by inheritance of a great industrial organization, owner of a famous racing stable, possessing many millions, was found dead outside of his door yesterday. Doctors attribute his death to "acute ethyliism, or alcoholism."

In New Jersey, Emil Witzke, past 50 years old, and a recluse, built a funeral pyre of wood, paper, pieces of furniture in his room, poured kerosene over it, lay down upon it, lighted a match and was burned to death. The agony lasted a few minutes at most, smoke mercifully ending it. But the death fills us with horror.

It might arouse thought in some who believe that Divine Power sentences creatures that it has made to burn in more horrible agony, forever and ever, through billions of years, where "their worm dieth not." What the vilest man would not do to a dog that had bitten him, he thinks his God does to millions of human beings.

Gen. Hugh L. Cooper, the American hydraulic engineer in charge of the Russian waterfall project, with its enormous dam, a mile long, believes that Russ'an ideas will change gradually and become less violently communistic.

They will, of course. Communism says to divide. Human beings are selfish, and as they accumulate more property the idea of dividing interests them less and less.

Those that want to see Russia back up from the Karl Marx idea toward the United States of America dollar idea should pra, that Russians may succeed financially. Nothing like wealth to make men conservative and change their opinions.

For the first time since 1928, the football players of Notre Dame see odds quoted against them. Bookmakers bet 10 to 8 that Southern California will beat the "unbeatable Notre Dame-Rockne team."

The combination of energy and sunshine from California is expected to conquer the wonderful fighting Irish and Middle West blend of Notre Dame.

COLGATE BEATS N. Y. U. IN BIG CHARITY TILT

Failure to Kick Goal After a Touchdown in the Final Period Fatal to Violet

Yankee Stadium, New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—Colgate pulled out a one-point victory today over New York University, 7 to 6, in a charity game before 20,000 spectators.

New York scored a touchdown in the last minute of play after a 78-yard drive, but Tanguay's try for the extra point with a place kick was blocked by Orsi, star Colgate end, who had tallied for the Maroon in the first period on a pass from Hart.

FIRST PERIOD

An offside penalty gave Colgate first down and the upstate eleven, after a few short thrusts, scored on a 30-yard pass, Hart to Oris. The latter took the ball over the goal line. Macaluso kicked the goal.

Score: Colgate, 7; N. Y. U., 0.

Two poor punts by Capt. Hart of Colgate each helped N. Y. U. get the ball on the opposing 36-yard line. The Maroon line threw back two plunges, however, and Abruzzino intercepted Bill McNamara's pass on Colgate's 25-yard line. Macaluso quickly punched off a first down, but Hart fumbled, lost seven yards before recovering and was forced to punt.

Colgate again seized a break, recovering on N. Y. U's 33-yard line when Bob McNamara, attempting a quick kick, booted the ball into the linemen. Doyle, guard, fell on the ball for Colgate. Macaluso dashed to a first down on the Violet 18-yard line and then reeled off three more as the first period ended.

SECOND PERIOD

Macaluso, in three rushes, bucked his way to the N. Y. U. three-yard line at the outset of the second period. The Violet then stopped Colgate on the one-yard line after three more rushes, and then recovered a fumble by Massluso on the four-yard line on fourth down. Marshall made the recovery. Bob McNamara's long punt was stumbled by Terry of Colgate and recovered

SECOND VICTIM OF SUBWAY SLASHER

Twelve-Inch Slit Is Cut in Fur Coat of a Brighton Girl Bumped by Dark Man

Boston's subway "slasher," who last year ripped the fur coats of half a hundred victims and had 100 police officers hunting him, is at work again.

The slasher claimed his second victim in two successive days in Miss Gertrude C. Barron, 29, of 26 Litchfield st., Brighton.

Yesterday the victim was Miss C. Estelle Davis of Commonwealth ave., Allston.

Miss Barron showed a fur coat cut 12 inches long downward in the back and about 10 inches wide in one place.

BUMPED BY DARK MAN

The girl did not feel the knife in action, but did recall that she was repeatedly bumped against by a dark man about five feet seven inches tall. She estimated his weight about 150 pounds.

Records show that this description fits that given last year by Miss Frances Couner of Dorchester, who said a man of five feet seven inches had annoyed her in the same manner—and afterward she noticed the slash.

POLICE NOTIFIED

The 20 special officers, many of them women, who are on duty in the shopping district were notified by telephone within three minutes after the complaint reached headquarters.

This force will be increased if further slashings occur, police said.

Various arrests were made, but the slashings continued. They finally "died out" as the cold season gave way to warm weather.

Ex-Harvard Star Missing

MILLIONAIRE IS DROWNED WHILE ON HUNT

Planes Had Joined Search for Inventor, Discovered Dead on Eagle Island Bar

Marblehead, Dec. 6—The body of Duncan Dana was found today on Eagle Island bar, the head was battered and the boots kicked off, evidence he had attempted to swim ashore from his boat.

Marblehead, Dec. 6—With the finding of an empty, drifting outboard motorboat in Salem Bay today, search was launched by airplanes, coast guard craft, fishing boats and private yachts for Duncan Dana, former Harvard and America football star and grandson of the late Charles A. Dana, founder of the New York Sun.

Dana is 39, married and has three children, and is a millionaire. He is an inventor and was formerly a research executive in the General Electric laboratories at Lynn, and now manufacturing oil burners.

He served with the Lafayette Escadrille, the famous flying corps, in the World War and has a plane of his own at Beverly airport, from where three of his friends took the air today to search for him along and off the North Shore.

Dana left his home at 41 Orne st. at 5 a. m. to go duck hunting for the day.

When he embarked from the float where he kept his boat, a small punt, used for duck hunting, was tied to the rear.

FINDS EMPTY BOAT

When Joseph Green, Salem fisherman, discovered the empty outboard motor the punt was missing.

Towing the abandoned boat to Salem it was identified as belonging to Dana and what friends knew as "Dana's favorite hunting rifle."

Communication with Baker's Island, used as a lighthouse station, and the only inhabited parcel of land in the entire bay, failed to bring any word of the missing Dana.

Chief of Police Irving Chapman communicated with the Bay Coast Guard station and every available craft, as well as privately owned motor boats and fishing schooners joined in the search.

Mrs. Anstis Dana wife of the missing man, although nearly prostrated by the shock, said her husband on leaving home this morning, said "I hope I have good luck."

The Danas have three small children.

Dana also has a brother, Anderson, who resides at the University Club, New York.

Dana was graduated from Harvard University in 1914 with an A. B. degree, two years later,

5000 FANS AT W. AND J. GAME

Pittsburgh, Dec. 6 (AP)—Overcast skies and dampened underfooting greeted Washington and Jefferson and Carnegie Tech here today as they opened their 17th annual gridiron encounter, a benefit for the unemployed. The unfavorable weather reduced the attendance to less than 5,000.

FIRST PERIOD.

W. and J. kicked off, halted Tech and then sent Wilson at the head of a drive which entered Tartan territory, where a fumble halted it. Tech punted again, recovered a fumble on the visitors' 26 and hammered on to W. and J.'s six-yard line with every Tech back contributing yardage. There W. and J. took the ball on downs.

Wilson's quick kick was carried

2 GET $139,000 UNDER WILL

Springfield, Dec. 6 (AP)—Louis Rickford and William Barry, youthful proteges of the late Mrs. Hannah L. Barry, widow of Garratt S. Barry, will each receive a trifle more than $139,000 as their share of the trust fund provided for them under the will of Mrs. Barry. This was shown in an accounting filed in probate court today.

Barry, formerly a liquor dealer d'ed, leaving the bulk of his estate to Mrs. Barry. She died a year later, leaving a will which after bequests to charitable and church organizations, left the residue in trust for the youths. Barry was the son of a nephew of Garratt S Barry, Jr., and Rickford was adopted by Mrs. Barry.

Mrs. Mary Magenis of Boston, a niece of Mrs. Barry, attempted to break the will, and she carried her case to the Supreme Judicial Court but a settlement was made. The estate originally totalled $500,000.

He is the son of a hardware store proprietor in the lower Pyrenees department. He educated himself, became a member of the French Academy and is noted as a historian, a literary critic and one of the most brilliant after-dinner speakers in France.

He lost a son in the war and France still remembers his reference to that bereavement in the moving speech with which he dedicated the tomb of the Unknown Soldier while he was Minister of War.

CONGRESS ACTS TO TAKE PUBLIC WORKS PROGRAM IN OWN HANDS

HOOVER PLAN IS BRANDED INADEQUATE

Senate Agricultural Committee Agrees on $35,000,000 Loan Fund Increase

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Dec. 6—With both the Hoover administration and congressional leaders pledging speed in expansion of public works to relieve unemployment, it appeared today Congress may take the program in its own hands and go far beyond the proposals of the White House.

The chief criticism directed toward the administration's six months' plan had changed from attacks on the alleged czarlike powers asked by Mr. Hoover to declarations the proposals are inadequate.

Administration leaders were defending their program on the ground economy also is necessary in making up the government's budget of nearly $5,000,000,000 to prevent further treasury deficits.

The first upset of the administration's program, an increase from $28,000,000 to $60,000,000 in the seed and feed loan fund for drought-stricken areas, was agreed by the Senate agricultural committee. The House agriculture committee was to fight over the same question in closed session today.

EMERGENCY FUND HEARINGS

Meanwhile, hearings on Mr. Hoover's $150,000,000 emergency fund were continued before the House appropriations committee, with indications the proposal would be laid before Congress early next week.

The administration plans to limit the highway expansion program to the $50,000,000 figure asked by Mr. Hoover in his emergency program, it was disclosed by Representative Dowell (R.) of Iowa, chairman of the House roads committee.

This program provides for advances to the States before next July 1 for emergency work. After that date the regular annual appropriation of $125,000,000 for federal-aid highways could be drawn upon.

BUILDING PROGRAM

A marked enlargement of the present $365,000,000 federal building program is planned. Representative Elliott (R.) of Indiana, chairman of the House public buildings committee, and Senator Keyes (R.) of New Hampshire, chairman of the same Senate committee, expect to receive the administration's detailed plan next week.

This plan probably will embrace additional authorizations to provide postoffice buildings in many small cities. It has been observed the present authorization will not make this possible, Elliott said.

A step toward immediate enlargement was taken when the House approved an increase from $48,000,000 to $60,000,000 in this year's allotment for buildings.

A bloc of rivers and harbors advocates are gathering strength for the bill of Senator Shipstead (F-L) of Minnesota and Representative Mansfield (D) of Texas for a $700,000,000 bond issue to complete all authorized rivers and harbors projects in five years.

BRUENING WINS ON 3 VOTES

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, Dec. 6—With opposition forces unable to rally a majority, The Reichstag today virtually legalized the financial dictatorship of President Von Hindenburg and Chancellor Heinrich Bruening.

By a vote of 293 to 253, the Reichstag voted down measures to nullify the Hindenburg financial decrees, and a non-confidence motion was defeated 291 to 256.

Another motion, designed to nullify the financial decrees promulgated by the President following dissolution of the Reichstag last July, was defeated 307 to 235.

The National Socialist (Fascist) party attempted to introduce another non-confidence motion, but this was ruled inadmissable by a vote of 298 to 233.

Garrett Is 'High Hatting' His Fellow Prisoners

This is the report from jail officials who say the other prisoners resent the aloofness of the ex-liquor squad raider.

Garrett refuses to mix with the men, even declining to go with the rest to the yard during exercise period. He will not leave his cell except when obliged to line up for the march to the cafeteria.

One prisoner with a sense of humor has informed the warden he will "leave the hoarding house if Boarder Garrett continues to feel too good for the rest of us."

Meanwhile, Dist. Atty. Foley has been checking the Maine law to see what may be done about bringing back for the trial, Miss Marion W. Raymenton. This former Boston social worker is in Lewiston and declines to return, saying she has no interest in testifying.

That the Garrett trial may start within 10 days appeared probable today.

Should the case be reached within that time it appeared that Judge Harold D. Williams, who recently presided over the Page & Shaw trial in Cambridge, will sit in the Garrett trial.

Rumors that Atty. Herbert J. Callahan had planned to ask for a change of venue when Garrett is called to trial in Suffolk County were branded as "ridiculous" today by Atty. Callahan.

YOUTH HERO OF 'L' RESCUE

Harry Pettigrew, 18, of Washington st., Roxbury, had no idea he was acting bravely when he rushed up the tunnel tracks from the Friend st. platform last night and flagged a train roaring upon a group of men striving to lift an unconscious man from the pit.

The youth disappeared immediately after the train ground to a stop a few feet from the desperately working group.

Later he made his identity known, but modestly disclaimed any unusual heroism.

British to Pray for Jobless Relief

London, Dec. 6 (AP)—Prayers for the solution of the unemployment problem in Great Britain were asked for by the Archbishop of Canterbury in his December letter to his diocese, the prelate declaring that the problem "ought to be lifted beyond the rivalries and recriminations of political parties." The archbishop appointed Sunday, Dec. 21, as the time for such a prayer.

Democratic Opportunity

Senator Glass recently issued a rousing, inspiring democratic statement, in which he arraigned Democrats for apologizing for Democratic victory.

There are some Democrats who apparently are willing to adopt the Republican theory that the country will be hurt by Democratic government.

Evidently the public did not think it would be, or they would not have elected so many Democrats.

It was during Republican regime that the financial collapse occurred.

It was during Republican regime that the country has been slowly forced into foreign entanglements, in spite of the protests of the public at the polls.

It was under Republican regime that the nation's foreign policy has been dominated by international bankers and by Wall Street speculators.

It was under Republican regime that the whole country has been turned into an armed camp in the attempt to enforce an unenforceable and un-American prohibition law.

It was under Republican regime that the constitutional rights of the states have been invaded and the constitutional liberties of the citizens suppressed.

The opportunity of the Democrats is to restore the government to genuine democracy and genuine Americanism.

When the people elected the Democrats, they did not want them to work with the Republicans and continue the same policies and the same calamities. Else they would have elected Republicans.

A little DEMOCRACY will not hurt business.

It will do business good to have money in the hands of little people who spend it, instead of big people who hoard it.

A little AMERICANISM will not hurt business.

It will do business good to have money held here in America to develop American industries, instead of shipped abroad to buy European war bonds.

A little old fashioned HONESTY would not hurt business.

It would do business good to prevent some of the over-speculation and over-capitalization of "cats and dogs" which have plundered the public and created depression.

The people want a change, and if they cannot get the change they want from the Democratic party, they will elect some other party.

Furthermore, they SHOULD do so and the Hearst papers will help them to do so.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

CURLEY HAS NEW JOBLESS PLAN

Mayor James M. Curley today suggested that the women's committee on unemployment launch a drive for the collection of funds so that credit slips, good in all stores, may be issued to persons out of work and in need of food and clothing.

The mayor offered his suggestion to James J. Phelan, chairman of the State executive committee on unemployment, after he had learned that plans were being formulated to solicit clothing from persons who can afford to part with some of their unused wearing apparel.

The idea of the latter plan was that giving such clothing might bring new purchases to the stores.

Mayor Curley said if funds were collected and credit slips issued, more money would be spent and more clothing purchased, with the result that extra work would be provided in all lines of industry.

He said he doubted that persons offering old clothes would go into the stores and make new purchases.

$750 Top Price for Notre Dame Game

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 6 (INS)—This city went football mad today over the Southern California-Notre Dame game. Ducats are bringing fancy prices. Some of the movie folk are reported to have paid as high as $750 for a pair of tickets on the 50-yard line.

30 MILLION FOR DROUTH FUND

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP)—The House agriculture committee today approved legislation for a $30,000,000 seed, feed and fertilizer loan to farmers in drouth areas.

The vote for 11 to 7.

The committee first rejected by 12 to 8 the resolution of Rep. Aswell, Democrat, Louisiana, making the fund $60,000,000.

The larger amount was unanimously approved yesterday by the Senate agriculture committee. The administration-set figure was $25,000,000, and Rep. Ketcham, Republican, Michigan, proposed the compromise.

A Ticket on the 3000 Mile Line

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Six boys who escaped from Matteawan Nut Factory are probably flying to Notre Dame game in Southern California.

We thought we saw them over at the six-day race in Madison Square Garden.

But the group proved to be a half-dozen bookkeepers who had run out of ink.

The way to catch those fellows is to think like them. If I was that way, where would I go?

Notre Dame's best player was fired because he was married.

Going to college is so dangerous that they will only use bachelors.

They will run up three touchdowns while the Notre Dame travelers are looking for their baggage.

Last big remaining game is Army-Navy. They will play for charity. None of which will be used in the scrimmages.

That game will wind up all the football season except your raccoon coat.

We would like to be in California today while the Notre Dame-California boys slug each other unconscious and the band plays, "Journeys End in Lovers' Greetings."

FOLEY PROBES AUTO RISK FRAUDS

Grand Jury Inquiry Is Looming as the Result of an Investigation

Dist. Atty. William J. Foley today began an investigation to "get at the bottom" of any auto insurance frauds in Boston or other Suffolk County communities similar to or allied with those alleged in Middlesex County, where 17 persons have been indicted.

He said he would call a special session of the grand jury if the facts warrant it. The next regular session does not come until next month.

At the same time, Middlesex authorities launched a fresh investigation, the results of which will be presented to the January grand jury, according to present plans.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick A. Crafts of Middlesex county indicated that, while this new inquiry deals with auto insurance cases, it involves different types of alleged fraud than those already disclosed.

COMPLAINT TO BROWN.

Insurance Commissioner Merton L. Brown, speaking by telephone from his country home in Houlton, Me., informed the Boston Evening American that some of the Middlesex County cases were first reported to him last summer, and he referred them to District Attorney Robert T. Bushnell.

"There was only one thing to do where there was actual evidence of fraud, and that was to notify the district attorney," said Commissioner Brown. "The cases developed more than I had any idea they would."

Asked if there were many cases of this kind, he said it was hard to put a finger on actual fraud. He said he might have more to say later.

The Middlesex County Grand Jury specifically suggested that the Suffolk County Grand Jury ascertain whether the crimes of extortion and compounding of a felony were committed in Boston by a large insurance company.

PUBLIC INTEREST

The Middlesex County grand jurors stated:

"We believe in the public interest a report should be made as to the words and acts of officials of the Travelers Insurance Company in forcing the payment of restitution to the said company on account of the larcenies involved."

They said there was evidence one George F. Delaney had bn promised that there would be no prosecution if ne made restitution. Louis Doyle, attorney for the company, said that no such promise was given. He said the company placed the facts before the district attorney after restitution had been made.

The scene of the alleged "acts and words" is given by the Middlesex jurors as the Hotel Statler. This will be the first matter taken up by Dist. Atty. Foley in his investigations.

FOLEY'S FIRST STEP

Foley's first step was to confer with Assistant District Attorney Crafts, who told him a copy of the report would be sent him on Monday.

"The grand jurors were incensed at the manner in which, as it was stated to them, the return of the money was demanded. They felt it was outrageous and so they voted to report it to the Suffolk Grand Jury," said Crafts.

"I shall study the report of the Middlesex County grand jurors and will get to the bottom of the charges without delay," said the Suffolk County prosecutor.

Of the 17 indictments, 15 were secret and the persons thus named are expected to be arrested in time for arraignment Monday, at which time their identity will be revealed.

The other two are George F. Delaney of Marlboro, investigator for the Travelers Insurance Company, and Thomas Murphy of Marlboro, adjuster for the Employers' Liability Company, indicted for larcenies of $1200 from the Travelers in three claims. They pleaded not guilty and were released in $2000 each.

It is alleged accidents were invented, fictitious persons said to be injured and claims paid, Delaney then recommending settlement after "investigation."

Denver, Dec. 6—The defense in the trial of Mrs. Pearl O'Loughlin, charged with the murder of her 10-year-old stepdaughter, scored a victory when Judge Calvert ruled no admissions or confessions Mrs. O'Loughlin might have made to police would be admitted as evidence.

'Iron Girls' Defeat Sorority Rivals on Gridiron, 8-6

Portland, Me., Dec. 6—Our "modern maidens" turned out to be "iron men" today in the much heralded football battle here between two teams composed entirely of girls of two Deering High school sororities.

Not a single girl was replaced by a substitute during the whole game of four periods of eight minutes—although the tackling was rough.

As for football togs, the girls paraded out on the field in sailor pants, sweaters, bloomers and whatever else they could appropriate from brothers. One girl played the entire game in high heels.

There was a big crowd, but nearly all were young people. Hardly a score of adults watched the two teams play on the exclusive grounds of the Portland Country Day School.

School authorities had opposed the game, threatening to disqualify all basketball squad members participating. True to their traditions of the modern girl, they all voted to enter the game.

Pi Kappa trailed Epsilon Tau Sigma until the last two minutes, when a 40 yard run by Capt. Gladys Merritt brought the score to eight to six. Previously they had scored two points on a safety. Epsilon girls, favored as winners, made their lone tally when Capt. Evelyn Brown ran 43 yards in the second period.

Much good football was played due to coaching of boy friends. The interal pass was greatly in evidence.

BELGIAN "BLACK DEATH" FOG LIFTS AFTER KILLING 64 VICTIMS

MYSTERY OF ITS POISON UNSOLVED

War Gas Theory Rejected by Scientists; Scores Are in Hospita's

Brussels, Belgium, Dec. 6 (AP)—Slowly, as it had come, the suffocating pall of poisoned fog which has choked the life out of more than threescore dwellers in the Meuse valley, began to disappear this morning as the sun bored through the mist.

If it had gone, however, it had taken with it the secret of its mysterious menace. Doctors in a dozen villages were too busy answering frantic calls to confer with the authorities seeking an answer to the riddle. They knew only that as the fog rolled in the victims coughed choked and died.

No more deaths were reported today, and as reports came in from the stricken districts it began to appear as though this terror had passed. Government authorities were on the ground to begin their investigation.

LIKE WAR GAS DEATHS.

The simple folk who fled their village homes in panic, or remained inside behind locked doors, could not be reassured, however, and persisted in the conviction that this death had come in waves of poisoned gas whose origin they could not explain.

Sixty-four deaths due to the fog were counted in eight villages. Many other persons were in hospitals seriously ill.

In every instance death came in the same manner, a choking as of asthma or asphyxiation and a sudden succumbing, with the final throes much like those of soldiers in the great war who, unprovided with masks, died in gas attacks.

Various theories were advanced to account for the appalling visitation. One of the most striking was that of Prof. J. B. S. Haldane, eminent British scientist, who said it was "something like the black death," the mysterious plague which ravaged western Europe in the 14th century, laying low one-third of the population.

Scientists had virtually abandoned the theory that poison gases, emanating from buried German ammunition dumps, were the cause of the deaths, which were regarded as being spread over too wide an area for such to be the case.

HOW IT STRIKES

The ministry of health undertook a searching medical and judicial inquiry into the visitation, and while awaiting its result before making an official statement, announced that the medical experts, from preliminary investigations, presume the deaths due to an intensely cold, wet fog which has lain over the area since Wednesday.

"It does not seem like an ordinary winter fog but lies in streaks," the newspaper People said of the mist. "One moment you are walking in ordinary daylight and then suddenly you find yourself against what looks like an impenetrable wall, in which the dim shapes of people are discernible moving about like phantoms. As you enter the fog, breathing becomes difficult and the atmosphere is pungent and clammy."

SPREAD LIKE "BLACK DEATH"

Haldane, advancing from London his theory of a new visitation of the "black death," said:

"I do not believe the epidemic can have been caused by war gas because the deaths have occurred in widely separated villages. They have been having floods in that district lately and it is possible that may have something to do with it."

Wet or foggy conditions are believed to be particularly favorable to the spread of the mysterious "black death."

The little town of Engis was the hardest hit by the malady. Its mayor, talking over the phone with a newspaper in England, explained that he himself had got up from a sick bed to answer the paper's call.

"The 3000 inhabitants of my little town are terror-stricken," he said. "Nobody knows what the cause is, but it is associated in the popular mind with the fog which has lain over the valley for the past few days. We already have 14 dead here and there are about 60 persons ill. Besides, there are hundreds of persons suffering with the disease, but not badly enough to go to hospitals.

HAS NO ODOR.

"Th symptoms are pains in the throat and the chest, with a severe dry cough that gives one no rest. I don't think the theory of German poison gas having been buried in the neighborhood and now corrupting the air is sound. The fog has no smell and no apparent taste."

Besides Engis, there were eight dead in Flemalle Haute, four in Flemalle Grande, five in Yvoy Ramet, ten in Jeneppe-sur-Meuse, seven in Ohee, eight in Hamay and Ampsin and ten in rural localities.

RIOTING MARKS WAR FILM IN GERMANY

Berlin, Dec. 6 (AP)—White mice, stench bombs, catcalls and shouts of denunciation were used by German Fascists to provide a tumultuous reception for the American-made movie of Erich Mario Remarque's novel, "All Quiet on the Western Front."

So successful was the demonstration the theater lights last night were turned off while police emptied the house. Later the showing of the picture was suspended. The show resumed today under heavy police protection.

Joseph Goebbels, Reichstag deputy, Berlin Fascist chief and right hand man of Adolf Hitler, led in the demonstration against the film. Police, respecting his parliamentary immunity, did not arrest him.

Surrounded by a bodyguard of Brownshirts, he awaited that part of the film where German volunteers are shown in hysterics during a bombardment. Shouts of derision that came from the Fascists spread throughout the audience and the storm of protest began in earnest.

Women screamed as their escorts were inveigled into fist fights, which police, hopelessly outnumbered, were powerless to prevent.

SCOTTISH MINE STRIKE ENDS

Glasgow, Scotland, Dec. 6 (AP)—Striking miners in the Scottish coal fields were ordered back to work immediately today by a conciliation board of owners and union delegates.

Work is to be resumed on the same wage scale in effect before the miners struck December 1. The agreement stipulates the collieries shall not be worked in more than 11 eight-hour shifts in two weeks.

An official announcement said this temporary truce would continue to the end of next February and that meantime the conferees would attempt to reach a permanent settlement.

LEAGUE COURT MEN SCARED

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP)—Friends of the League Court in the Senate are confused over the course to be pursued for its ratification.

Expecting to have the issue placed before them by President Hoover next Monday, they show an inclination to lay it aside until next year. They are apprehensive about the strength of the opposition, which they concede has increased since the Senate voted for entry in the court, with reservations, four years ago.

The refusal of the opponents to consider any agreement for a vote and the apparent willingness of the foes to report the adherence protocol for consideration in the short session has increased the fears. It may be used as a weapon to force the dreaded extra session.

If President Hoover sends up the protocol Monday Chairman Borah intends to take it up at the regular session of the committee Wednesday.

Chester, Pa., Dec. 6 (AP)—Carrying two of her four small children from their cribs as they slept, a mother, believed by police to have been demented, drowned them in a bathtub late last night.

The dead children were Allison, two months old, and Hoover, two years.

The woman, police said, was interrupted from her plan to take her own life by arrival of her husband.

"I thought they were better dead," was the only explanation, police said, she would make. "I could never give them the education they should have, and I did not think I could raise them without the right education."

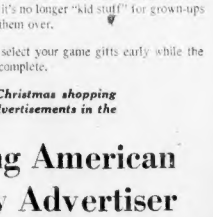
16 Shopping Days to Christmas

Let's play a game at Christmas-time - - - and afterward



Yesteryear it was games for the youngsters. This year it's games for everyone. Camelot, Backgammon, Contract and Auction. Midget golf, at home; ping pong and a host of other games "have the call" whenever good fellows (or girls) (or both) get together.

Christmas stocks of many Boston merchants include fine assortments of all the popular games—and it's no longer "kid stuff" for grown-ups to spend a few hours looking them over.

It is a good plan, however, to select your game gifts early while the season's stocks are fresh and complete.

Tailored Silk Frock of Plain Lines

By ANN ARDEN

WHEN IN doubt wear a tailored silk frock. Suppose your social calendar is filled with important engagements and the day crowds dozens of occasions into some 12 or 14 hours. The simple frock of silk can trip merrily from one "date" to another with undisturbed smartness.

* * *

ITS VERY simplicity assures it of a favorite place in your wardrobe, even though it must vie with a frothy new evening frock or a glittering Sunday night confection.

* * *

SO FAR as color is concerned it may be of any hue that will fit into the wardrobe. And though the lines may and should be very simple, there are innumerable styles that may be chosen to flatter the wearer.

* * *

ONE SMART version of the tailored silk frock is the popular tunic frock, very simple as to line and trimming. Of black canton crepe, the long tunic flares slightly. The cossack severity is softened by the cowl neckline and the little bow posed upon the shoulder. It is bordered with white fur cloth.

* * *

ANOTHER FROCK employs pleats to keep the slim straight line of the skirt and yet allow the fullness needed at the hemline. A bit of peplum is flaunted below a narrow belt. Soft collar and cuffs add a note of demure charm to the otherwise rather severe frock.

* * *

FROM LUNCHEON, such charming frocks could go to matinee, shopping expedition or bridge with equal assurance of being appropriate and equal to any situation.

THE LONG tunic frock pictured has its knife-pleated underskirt and tight fitting sleeves fashioned of brown silk crepe. The tunic, of graceful length, has three-quarter flaring sleeves, and is printed in slender sprays of cream and blue; a metal link belt marks the waistline. The upstanding collar is of white crepe, its long side run through wide eyelet and emerging as bow.

* * *

WHETHER YOU are blonde, olive-skinned, or titian-haired, there are shades of blue that you can wear. Stained glass blue is a new shade that appeared in the Paris midseason openings. The name is self descriptive, for the color is that shade of blue with a very slight cast of purple peculiar to the stained glass window. Orange is another shade that is stressed, especially as an accenting color.

ALTHOUGH NOT THE FIRST balloon ascension in the United States, it required courage to make the ascent pictured here on September 13, 1834. W. L. Durant was the daring aeronaut. Durant ascended about 8000 feet and came down in safety although at one time he floated over the harbor. The ascent was begun in a crowded amphitheater, with booming cannon and a cheering multitude. It was estimated that 20,000 witnessed the event. Some crowd for that day.

THEORY OF LIFE EXPLAINED BY EINSTEIN

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
Universal Service Special Radio Dispatch

(World Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.)

S. S. Belgenland, Dec. 6.—"We can only see the universe by the impressions of our senses reflecting indirectly the things of reality."

This is the theory of life and living which dominate the existence and being of Prof. Albert Einstein, German physicist and mathematician, originator of the theory of relativity and its corollaries.

In the sumptuous, flowery salon on the Belgenland which as it plows across the Atlantic carrying one of Europe's greatest minds to the new world, Universal Service was granted the first interview with Prof. Einstein since he departed from Berlin.

GUARDED BY STAFF

It was the first occasion on which the great physicist allowed himself to be quoted, directly or indirectly, since leaving his home. He desires quiet and solitude so that he may work throughout the day; his walking tours on the breezy promenade deck find him well guarded by his staff and secretary.

This correspondent, nevertheless, found the master easy of approach once the formalities were over. Professor Einstein's quiet dignity dominated the informal chat, while Frau Einstein, sitting at his side, was eagerness itself to see that that dignity and peace must remain undisturbed.

I asked this genius who lives apart from the world in limitless space what work engaged him for 10 hours daily with his assistant and secretary when he is supposed to be vacationing.

WRITES ANSWER

Professor Einstein, who is so precise and so fearful of interviews, wrote his answer, as his German wife whispered:

"The professor is most afraid of misquotations. He's name as a precise scientist must be jealously guarded."

What is it that keeps this zealous physicist constantly at work; that prompts him to deny himself to anyone who might not understand the joy it is to be immersed in a pool of abstractions, figures, light and space? Here is Frau Einstein's translation of her husband's written response:

"My endeavor to find a mathematical-physical theory of space and matter. I am trying to construct Maxwell's theory of the electro-magnetic field to unify the theories of gravitation and electricity and matter to a unitary identical conception."

The Maxwell to whom America's eminent visitor referred is James Clerk Maxwell, a Scottish physicist, who propounded the electromagnetic theory of light in 1865; the man who gave to thermo-dynamics "Maxwell's Demon," who is supposed to witness the workings of his law.

"NOT AN ASTRONOMER"

I asked the professor if, when he is the guest of Dr. Robert A. Millikan and Dr. Paul S. Epstein at Wilson Observatory in Pasadena, Cal., in January, he would engage in astronomical studies. His careful reply was:

"I am not an astronomer, but we shall endeavor to check up my conclusions together."

In my hand, at the time, was a copy of Sir James Jeans' recently published "The Mysterious Universe." Showing it to my host, I asked him if he agreed with Sir James that the Supreme Creator was a mathematician, and the universe a product of pure mathematics.

There was a long pause, and the wrinkles in the Einstein brow crept closer together with thought. And then, in English, he said quietly:

"It is not certain yet, but it is an interesting hypothesis."

LEVINE'S WORLD HOP FOILED

Vienna, Dec. 6 (AP)—Charles A. Levine, who today was cleared of a charge of conspiracy to counterfeit French coins, told The Associated Press it was a plan to fly around the world alone in 15 days which got him into trouble. Proceedings were suspended for "absence of proof."

"I was full of this plan when I came to Vienna last August," he said, "and I had been looking up firms for a gyroscope and other instruments useful to a flier traveling alone.

"I got the idea of making little medals with my head stamped on one side and on the other a globe with a plane flying around it. I was going to distribute these as I went around the world. The very morning after the idea struck me I went out to an engraver.

"This engraver," said Levine, "didn't know any English and his German was pretty bad, but we got along. He must have got the notion that I was a counterfeiter. I found out later that he sent word to the police with his suspicions and then I was in a jam."

HUNT MISHAPS SET RECORD

Springfield, Dec. 6 (AP)—The army of sportsmen in Massachusetts deer hunters was largely augmented on the closing day of the season's first week. Rarely if ever in the history of deer hunting in this state has the number of casualties to hunters equalled the number rolled up to date.

One shooting fatality has occurred in which Lewis Ranchor of Warren met death by a companion's gun. Directly due to the hunting season were the deaths of four Connecticut men who were burned in a hunting cabin in East Otis Tuesday.

The returns in deer killed have been disappointing and the reports of practically every day this week have been far below the figures for last year.

U. S. WOMAN IN ESCAPE FROM BANDIT GANG

(Copyright, 1930, by International News Service.)

Peiping, Dec. 6—The hardships and perils of a 40-day tourney from interior China to Peiping and capture by bandits after a spirited battle between the hill nomads and a Mongol escort were related today by the released American missionary Mrs. H. D. Hayward of Seattle, and her companions, Miss E. Gomersall, of England, on their arrival here.

Relating their story of adventure, Mrs. Hayward said they utilized all means of travel after leaving Lanchow from camels to oxcarts, skin rafts, boats, automobiles and trains.

BATTLE ATTACKERS

In Kansi Province the women were set upon by a band of mounted bandits, who swooped out of the hills and attacked the Mongol escort. For a time the latter fought off their attackers, but in the end took to their heels.

The bandits galloped up and seized Mrs. Hayward by the arm, forcing her to stumble alongside a trotting horse. She was stripped of all her outer clothing and robbed of her baggage. The same happened to Miss Gomersall.

They expected to be held for ransom, but unexpectedly the Mongols returned and surprised the bandits, chasing them off.

HOVER NEAR CAMP

Their troubles, however, were not over yet. The bandits hovered around the Mongols camp waiting for the party to venture out in the open. For eight days and nights Mrs. Hayward and Miss Gomersall sat huddled in a tiny mountain hut, with nothing to eat but stale bread. The bandits remained in plain sight.

Finally, four armed automobiles and a Chinese cavalry detachment sent by Anglo-Americans in Paotowchen, 30 miles distant, sallied forth and rescued them.

4 YOUTHS HELD IN HOLDUP

A band of youthful robbers who went to a South End hotel room each night and split the spoils of their crimes, is believed by the police to have been broken up as a result of the arrest of four Dorchester youths, two of whom are said to have confessed and involved others.

The charges preferred against them include robbery while armed, assault with a dangerous weapon, having burglars' tools in their possession and having a loaded revolver in their possession.

Several victims of recent crimes of violence in Metropolitan Boston called at police headquarters today in an effort to identify the four men under arrest.

These under arrest are Frank W. Quinlan, 19, of Sidney st., Dominic Frassica, 19, of Coleman st., Patrick F. Carr, 18 of Bellevue st. and Edward McAlaney, 19, of Hamilton st.

The first three named men, according to the police, were identified by Thomas Dowling, lodger at South End hotel as the three who robbed James O'Brien, proprietor, of $8.

According to police, two of the four, confessed that they met regularly in a South End hotel and planned their crimes. Later, they divided their spoils there, the police say.

Carroll of the diocese had forbidden him to make an address in the Community Church on December 19 because it was a non-Catholic place of worship. His subject was to have been "My Impressions of 1930 America."

Wants Children Warned Against Drunken Drivers

Editor Boston American:

Wouldn't it be well to warn all the school children to be on the lookout for drunken auto drivers now that the famous Baby Volstead act is repealed?

It was stated before the election by the "drys" that 700,000 school children will be in danger of being killed. I also fear that some of the schoolhouses will be demolished and I suggest that the authorities fortify them with extra fences. No wonder Mrs. Peabody moved to Florida with her grandson. Massachusetts is no place for decent people to live in after Volstead ian has been repudiated. J. COLLINS.

Dr. Conrad Praised for Fighting Good Fight

Editor Boston American:

Rev. Dr. Conrad, pastor of the Park St. Church has fought a good fight for the drys. He has now resigned from the presidency of the Prohibition Loyalty League. Let another take his office.

Dr. Conrad is no trimmer. You know where to find him, whether you agree with him or not. When in good trim he fights well, and is not afraid of the smoke and verbal cartridges of controversy. He is always in the front rank. You will never find him at the headquarters some distance from the raging controversy.

During his long term of service at the church which he served so well for a quarter of a century, he has kept "Brimstone Corner," as this church was called in early days, in the vanguard of making people wiser in their generation.

Some of us have not always agreed with his conclusions, but we do admire him for some enemies he has made and is never afraid of. N. H. LOOMIS.

Prohibition, Like Most Laws, Unenforceable

Editor Boston American:

Some time ago a letter in your paper stated that prohibition never could be enforced. This started me thinking. How many laws in this country are enforced? There are 50,000,000 of crimes committed annually in the United States. Suppose for one moment they should be presented for punishment, why more than one-half of the people would be in jail. You cannot enforce three-fourths of this law.

Many states forbid publication of Sunday newspapers and the running of trains and motor cars. The anti-trust law; it cannot be enforced. There is a law that an auto cannot turn a corner at more than four miles an hour. There is a law against gambling in Boston and do something at once. B. N. HARRISON.

Veteran Cites Sort of Men He Fought to Save

Editor Boston American:

Just a few words regarding the unemployment situation. Recently I applied for a position. I have had about 10 years practical experience. My prospective employer who is working night and day, making over 600 calls a week (by his own admission), just couldn't bring himself to the point of hiring me, but elected to keep on doing two men's work. Just trying to do his bit to relieve present circumstances.

Another big hearted citizen(?) wanted me to work entirely on commission, not being willing to gamble a small weekly salary against my past record. "For," as he explained, jobs are hard to get. "In other words he was trying to capitalize on other people's misfortune.

In 1918, when the draft was on, jobs were not hard to get; then. There, buddies, are two specimens for whom I sacrificed 15 months of my life in the so-called cause of democracy.

In Geo. M. Cohan's old play, "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," a character, Mrs. Purdy, in tears over the death of Mr. Castleton, cracked:

"How soon we are forgotten."

That remark is about 25 years old, but still appropriate.

"Buy Now," but How, If This Be True

Editor Boston American:

We hear a great deal about concerns promising the President there would be no wage cuts. Also the unemployment committees of state, likewise, President Hoover has said manufacturers that cut wages at present were worse than "Communists," which is very true.

In my town we have a company that is laying off men and substituting girls for one-third of wages paid to the men. Some of the girls earn from $9 to $12 per week, which, of course, does not help them to "Buy Now." Some of the people in my town work in a mill where, on Monday last, wages were cut from 10 to 30 per cent. Yet the mill's raw product is at its lowest in years. Some of the girls quit work because of a cut.

Auto Grave Yards Start a Protest

Editor Boston American:

That's a good suggestion in your paper "License all auto graveyards." It is a great disfigurement of the countryside to see autos junked in fields here and there and being junked there at this season of the year more than ever.

Look out of the car window as you get near the City of Lynn and see these graveyards parking their noses here and there.

Sometime ago I wrote a letter against junking autos in public places where they could be seen rank with rust, and did hope some genius would devise a plan to turn these old heroes of the road into something else, as gasolene was formerly dubbed waste and look at it now. N. M. LEE.

Medford Alderman Urges Payment of Cash Bonus

Editor Boston American:

One of the most vital needs of bringing to an end this economic depression is the immediate circulation of large sums of money.

Why not let the richest nation on the face of the earth pay to the veterans, who served so well in the World War, the adjusted service compensation certificate now, without any further or unnecessary delay?

There are thousands of worthy veterans who are borrowing on their certificates because they have no other source of relief. They are in dire circumstances and therefore they must borrow money on their bonus, and as we all know that most of these veterans will never pay up on these loans because they will not be in a position to do so.

When a new loan is made the money due on previous loans is deducted, also 6 per cent interest, and the veteran only receives a few dollars, because his loan was not paid up in 20 days.

Now, at this rate a veteran having a bonus of $1500 would at the end of 20 years receive just one-half of that amount, the remaining half going for interest and charges.

Why not let us all, veterans of Massachusetts, get behind the bill introduced by Wright Patman of Texas, which calls for the immediate payment of the bonus. Write your senators and congressmen, urging them to support the Patman bill in this session. By doing this, we will be helping to bring to an end this unemployment situation and the depression, because these huge sums of money would be put into immediate circulation.

We veterans would purchase homes or automobiles, furniture, clothing and other necessities of life, and the buying power of this large sum of money would soon start the wheels of industry humming again.

Let all fair minded citizens get behind this movement and assist us veterans in securing the passage of the Patman bill, which means so much to us and to the prosperity of the country.

"Idle Rich" Are Our Hardest Workers

Editor Boston American:

There was a time when well-to-do business men were called "idle rich." But those days have gone forever.

Those men of leisure are master minds. The world owes them a debt of gratitude. They are big employers giving jobs to thousands. God bless them!

Even high executives work more hours than the individual at times and nobody knows half of the troubles of these gentlemen, imagining it is a path of roses.

Their charity contributions, money for research laboratories, colleges, medical science, public and private hospitals, patrons of art, heading philanthropic bureaus and buying land to build churches, are some of the wonderful things they do.

Let's give them a glad hand.

MORRIS MILLER.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

Boston Christmas shoppers and others should keep to the right in crossing streets and using sidewalks.

With the number of people on the streets, these days before Christmas, relief from unnecessary congestion would be in evidence if this simple rule is heeded.

Any one on Boston streets can see how a simple rule like this would correct much of the discourteous ways that prevail on account of the helter-skelter fashion in which people walk and knock one another.

Then in crossing the streets:

"Be sure you're right, then go ahead."

Mind signal lights and don't neglect them when they are against crossing, though the street be clear of autos. An auto may come upon you when you least expect it.

Do Something to Help Instead of Talking

Editor Boston American:

During a discussion in Boston, last week, it was suggested by one of the speakers that a National Industrial Planning Board be established to regulate production, so that there will never be overproduction. This will stop some of this present distress.

Then again, the well-to-do should stop some of their loose ways of spending money and begin to spend money to increase consumption and thus aid production.

It is evident that many precious things are purchased, but this type of spending money does not help real production. What we want more than ever is the fixing of prices which would provide for fair wage scales and fair margins of profit.

Let us all stop talking what will help and do something at once. B. N. HARRISON.

Still Waiting After Six Months for Job

Editor Boston American:

Last April the census man called representing the Federal Government that was so anxious to help the fellow who was out of a job.

I was out of a job six months at the time and six more at the top of it at this time, and thousands are just like me, out of work. Has one of the men who they knew was out of work, ever heard from anyone who wanted that question answered?

It was really the most direct way of getting in touch with the fellow who needs a job and was really willing to work, but instead of a job they appoint commissions, and commissioners didn't need a job.

One commission since the day it was appointed has done nothing, but cry day after day, "Do your shopping early."

I have met several gentlemen, members of the commissions, one was surprised to hear I wasn't working, another said "It's the depression," and still another member said it cannot go on this way forever.

I wonder if he meant unemployment or the existence of the commission. Why not appoint a commission to instruct the commissions on what they were really appointed for?

I would like to state to those appointing any commissions to work on the unemployment situation in the near future that I am available for a job in that capacity, with a keen knowledge of what unemployment really means.

But commissions are commissions and unemployment is unemployment. I wanted a job before they were appointed and I still want a job, even on a commission. A VETERAN OF WAR AND UNEMPLOYMENT.

In my town we have a company that is laying off men and substituting girls for one-third of wages paid to the men. Some of the girls earn from $9 to $12 per week, which, of course, does not help them to "Buy Now." Some of the people in my town work in a mill where, on Monday last, wages were cut from 10 to 30 per cent. Yet the mill's raw product is at its lowest in years. Some of the girls quit work because of a cut.

Auto Grave Yards Start a Protest

Editor Boston American:

That's a good suggestion in your paper "License all auto graveyards." It is a great disfigurement of the countryside to see autos junked in fields here and there and being junked there at this season of the year more than ever.

Look out of the car window as you get near the City of Lynn and see these graveyards parking their noses here and there.

Sometime ago I wrote a letter against junking autos in public places where they could be seen rank with rust, and did hope some genius would devise a plan to turn these old heroes of the road into something else, as gasolene was formerly dubbed waste and look at it now. N. M. LEE.

Medford Alderman Urges Payment of Cash Bonus

Editor Boston American:

One of the most vital needs of bringing to an end this economic depression is the immediate circulation of large sums of money.

Why not let the richest nation on the face of the earth pay to the veterans, who served so well in the World War, the adjusted service compensation certificate now, without any further or unnecessary delay?

There are thousands of worthy veterans who are borrowing on their certificates because they have no other source of relief. They are in dire circumstances and therefore they must borrow money on their bonus, and as we all know that most of these veterans will never pay up on these loans because they will not be in a position to do so.

When a new loan is made the money due on previous loans is deducted, also 6 per cent interest, and the veteran only receives a few dollars, because his loan was not paid up in 20 days.

Now, at this rate a veteran having a bonus of $1500 would at the end of 20 years receive just one-half of that amount, the remaining half going for interest and charges.

Why not let us all, veterans of Massachusetts, get behind the bill introduced by Wright Patman of Texas, which calls for the immediate payment of the bonus. Write your senators and congressmen, urging them to support the Patman bill in this session. By doing this, we will be helping to bring to an end this unemployment situation and the depression, because these huge sums of money would be put into immediate circulation.

We veterans would purchase homes or automobiles, furniture, clothing and other necessities of life, and the buying power of this large sum of money would soon start the wheels of industry humming again.

Let all fair minded citizens get behind this movement and assist us veterans in securing the passage of the Patman bill, which means so much to us and to the prosperity of the country.

"Idle Rich" Are Our Hardest Workers

Editor Boston American:

There was a time when well-to-do business men were called "idle rich." But those days have gone forever.

Those men of leisure are master minds. The world owes them a debt of gratitude. They are big employers giving jobs to thousands. God bless them!

Even high executives work more hours than the individual at times and nobody knows half of the troubles of these gentlemen, imagining it is a path of roses.

Their charity contributions, money for research laboratories, colleges, medical science, public and private hospitals, patrons of art, heading philanthropic bureaus and buying land to build churches, are some of the wonderful things they do.

Let's give them a glad hand.

HARD TIMES BEGIN TO RELENT

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

HAS THE REJUVENATION of the theater set in? There are happy omens to given encouragement to the thought. Hard times have been generally accepted along the drama's courses as something already established, and from which only time and a new administration can afford relief. Yet, out of the darkness comes a gleam that discloses the path to dollars and cents in a large way. The lean specter of misfortune is dancing on feeble legs.

• • •

THE FIRST REAL SIGN of brighter days has already arrived. The theatergoer is returning to his favorite playhouse; temples that are shuttered and barred are being polished up for reopening. While Ruth Draper, as a theatrical attraction, must be listed as just another of those one-woman shows, she has, without much fuss or flurry, knocked the spots out of the Wilbur's record for any single week of the present season. Just between ourselves, Miss Draper has upset every calculation of the town's most learned referees in matters of art and drama. For a week she has found prosperity rampant, and has made the most of it.

Nicholas Young

• • •

WHILE MISS DRAPER'S single week at the Wilbur is perhaps the season's outstanding victory of prosperity, matters across the way at the Shubert also have taken an upward turn. Now you will find Queenie Smith and "The Street Singer" announced as continuing tenants in a theater that was expected to be closed tonight. No sane business man turns his back upon a paying customer, nor will the Messrs. Shubert—whose hopes for Boston must be rising. "The Street Singer," originally booked for two weeks and then extended to three, is now to remain at the Shubert indefinitely.

• • •

THE REOPENING of the Tremont on Monday, with the Theater Guild's "Green Grow the Lilacs," and the reclamation of the Colonial on Christmas Day with "Strictly Dishonorable," gives more cheer to those who have insisted that things are not as bad as indicated. Except for a single week with "Meteor" at the Tremont last season, the Theater Guild is entering upon its first determined experiment in these regions outside the Hollis St. theater. Such reports as are available indicate the continued potency of the Guild's subscription list. "Green Grow the Lilacs" seems assured of a smart sendoff.

• • •

AND TO THESE glad tidings may be added that bright lights will soon twinkle again over the quondam Mr. Clive's Copley. E. Cowles Strickland, whose splendid work at Stockbridge brought its own reward, becomes the director of a new organization that will present "Rebound" there late in the present month, probably Dec. 26. This is the Donald Ogden Stewart comedy, which was done in New York by Arthur Hopkins.

• • •

IN THE MEANTIME, E. E. Clive, who abandoned the Copley for Worcester, is traveling again. During the coming week he will take up artistic duties in Providence.

QUEENIE SMITH

JUNE WALKER
MISS WALKER will be seen Monday night in "Green Grow the Lilacs" on the stage of the Tremont. This play marks the opening of the Theater Guild's season in Boston.

KATHARINE CORNELL
MISS CORNELL stars in "Dishonored Lady" which will open at the Wilbur Monday night. She is regarded as one of the most brilliant actresses on the American stage.

BARBARA WILLISON
MISS WILLISON is one of the many fine performers in "Street Scene" at the Majestic.

STAGE ROPES IN STARS OF THE LARIAT

Among the various features of the Theater Guild's first production of its third Boston season, "Green Grow the Lilacs," is the group of cowboys and cowgirls engaged for the play at the conclusion of rodeo contests in New York.

The drama calls for these characters, and while it would have been easy to have procured regular actors and to garb them in the manner of the Westerners, it would not, in the opinion of the Guild directors, have been so easy to have given them the drawling Western speech, with its distinctive dialects. Nor could a stage cowboy easily simulate the walk of a man who has spent many of his waking hours on a horse, a walk which is loose-jointed and in which the legs are somewhat bowed.

The third reason for the engagement of these genuine people of the range was that the action of the play calls for the singing of many folksongs and ballads of the West, which must be sung in a manner that would be difficult to anyone unfamiliar with the yells and shouts which accompany parts of the songs.

James Patterson seems to be most famous of the cowboys engaged for "Green Grow the Lilacs," which opens at the Tremont on Monday evening, for the first performance on any stage.

GOOD WOMEN PREFERRED BY ACTRESS TO 'THE NAUGHTY'

By KATHARINE CORNELL

Star of "Dishonored Lady," at the Wilbur Monday

Believe it or not, I prefer good women to bad; I like best to be the calm, decent and elusive sort of person; and I prefer Candida above all my other roles. As a matter of fact, only four out of the 14 major roles I have played on Broadway have been "bad" women—in "Tiger Cat," "The Letter," "The Green Hat," and now, in "Dishonored Lady." And only two out of the four were unsympathetic parts.

Last year I did "The Age of Innocence," a lovely thing, and next year I have a beautiful play. So you see, I really have no penchant for naughty parts. I like the "Dishonored Lady" because she is complex, and there are so many interesting things one can do with her, not because she is bad. It is not the kind of a play that is often written today, and I was afraid I might never have another chance to play such a one. It is more of the Sardou school, and that was the school that made actors. And I think a melodrama is a good thing, now and then.

Katharine Cornell

But let us get back to our discussion of "bad" women. First of all, let me say that I believe the chief function of an actress is to use her art to interpret human personality on the stage, not to furnish ethical commentaries upon it. The artist in the theater offers them an interpretation of life.

Then, there is another angle. As materiel for exciting plays, regular normal lives, lived in changeless routine, offer playwrights little. It is the more highly strung and intense, the less patterned and more flaming lives that make the stuff of drama. Almost every playwright from Euripides down has recognized this. Sometimes the flame and intensity point the way to the breaking of laws either human or divine and we have a Medea, a Lady Macbeth, a Mrs. Alving. Unhappy, all of them; but no one can deny their interest or their appeal to pity and terror.

So with Leslie Crosby in "The Letter," with Iris March in "The Green Hat,"—how I loved Iris!—with Madeleine Cary in "Dishonored Lady," they may be without the pale, but if an actress can convey to her audience a real comprehension of their complexities, she is breaking down intolerance and creating human sympathy for these isolated figures, exiled from their kind.

Most of the persons making up the average American audience are living decent, moral lives. They don't know—to put it tritely—how the other half lives. They don't know how a seemingly unimportant event in a person's life sometimes conspires inexorably to bring them to grief. It does audiences like that positive good to see plays like "Dishonored Lady."

CATHERINE DALE OWEN

BRIGHT IS NEW STAR IN HER U. S. DEBUT

Marlene Dietrich would brighten any corner in the world's films. Not since the ice age suddenly shut in upon the art of the motion picture has so gorgeous a female of the species brought new face and form and talent to the screen. Last year gave us Maurice Chevalier; 1930 follows suit with the German lady of the lights and shadows. In truth, she adds a golden touch to "Morocco," which had its premiere at the Washington St. Olympia and the Uptown yesterday.

Miss Dietrich's presence, with the aid of Paramount's painstaking effort, lifts "Morocco" from the rut of French Foreign Legion movies. Of the talkies dealing with life and love in that often halued unit, this last production is easily the best. It moves smoothly and grippingly: it has far, far more than the usual talkie's portion of true motion picture values. There are blessed lapses of dialogue. Out of the silence the audience's imagination is incited into activity, and the brain senses its own appreciation of sand, and palm, and shades of the narrow streets. Upon the beholder the lure falls heavily: he becomes part and parcel of it all. This is tribute to direction, and the acting, and the almost perfect photography.

In a way, the story is somewhat more sophisticated than previous Legion photoplays.

MYSTERY IS THE THING TO LURE

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"THE BAT WHISPERS" is probably the best of all the talkie mystery thrillers. It came to Loew's State yesterday, another film that ought to prove a gold mine at the box office. Incidentally, it may be said that Friday is now become a red letter day of the film week; for Loew's Orpheum has now swung to that day for its openings, bringing the total to five theaters changing fare at this time.

• • •

BOTH LOEW HOUSES put forth sterling shows, the Orpheum having that splendid photoplay, "Min and Bill," equal of the best that Manager Victor Morris has had in some time. At the State Manager Joseph Brennan smiles with equal Yuletide good cheer for "The Bat Whispers" entertained audiences large in numbers. The production is characterized by general excellence throughout, and by the stellar fashion in which Director Roland West has built up his atmosphere of weirdness and has concealed the secret of his plot to the last sequence. You're a better man than we are, Gunglia Dhin, if you can outsit who The Bat be ere Mr. West lets you in on the enigma.

Chester Morris

THE BAT STRIKES terror repeatedly. Murder is done at the time and place specified. Then strange noises are heard in a mansion. Eerie happenings come early and often; chills up the spine and "goose-flesh" are the barometer of your feelings. Romance is intertwined with the intricately threading tale. Now and again you are guessing at the identity of the arch criminal. Guessing wrongly most likely. Then with a snap of the whip finish it all becomes clear as day. You're wondering why you didn't hit it before. For minutes afterwards the strange story will haunt you, and you will undoubtedly agree that "The Bat Whispers" is one of the best of its movie family and intensely thrilling.

• • •

MR. WEST KNOWS his motion picture values. Hence the film sweeps snappily onward, never halting in its course, never loosing its grip on taut nerves. Silence in the screen art is golden, and particularly is this true of these mystery photoplays. So the clever director minimizes his dialogue, often loses sight of human speech. Lights and shadows mutely build up the mystic atmosphere, inciting the imagination as only silence can. Sudden noises there are human, appropriate to the action. Suspense is thus kept at peak pitch, while the camera's shoot here and there, at this angle and that, all toward the making of a splendid picture.

• • •

CHESTER BENNETT, as the star, good in "Alibi" and everything else he has done, wins new laurels. Gustav Von Seyffertitz is another classy performer. Grayce Hampton is superb as Cornelia; Una Merkel fair as Dale.

For thrills, see "The Bat Whispers." It bristles with them.

SCREEN VIES WITH STAGE

A splendid program, both on screen and stage, was presented at Loew's Orpheum Theater yesterday in inaugurating the new policy of starting all shows on Fridays. The leading film attraction is "Min and Bill," a gripping and humorous affair, featuring the popular pair, Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery.

The "Chinese Whoopee Revue," a talented and entertaining group of 20 Celestial singers and dancers, runs off with the headline stage honors. Yesterday's audience warmly applauded them for their fast and zestful novelty offering.

Bob Carney and Jean, Hub vaudeville favorites, again present a delightful bit of comedy and dancing. Other artists on this week's all-star bill are Raymond Wilbert, comedy golf genius; John Quinlan, assisted in a musical and singing skit by Helen Gordon, and Hubert Dyer and company, eccentric gymnasts.

The New Plays

TREMONT — "Green Grow the Lilacs," an American folk play by Lynn Riggs. A story of old days in Oklahoma. Included in the cast are June Walker, Richard Hale, John Patterson, Lee Strasberg, Eula Guy and Tex Ritter; also cowboys and cowgirls. Settings by Raymond Sovey; staged by Herbert Biberman, a Theater Guild production.

• • •

TROUBLE HAS HAPPY END

"Today," drama of modern society life, with Conrad Nagel in the stellar role, and Catherine Dale Owen as leading lady, feature the double program at the Park. The case of a young couple, financially swamped by the stock market crash, is the paramount issue. The husband grits his teeth and disposes of all he owns to begin with a "clean slate." He starts to climb to fortune all over again. But the wife cannot accustom herself to the commonplace existence she is forced to endure. A breach between husband and wife follows. How the two come out of their differences, paralleling that of thousands of couples today, brings the picture to an unexpected climax.

The second feature is "Phantom of the Desert," a "Western," starring Jack Perrin. The "phantom" is "Starlight," ace of wild horses.

COMEDY BAND ON THE BILL

The new stage show starting Monday at the Scollay will be headed by an internationally famous actor Carl Freed, called "U-Rope's Foremost Musical Director," who brings his comedy band of nine men with him. Freed is unique among orchestra leaders, inasmuch as he leads the orchestra with the aid of a mouth organ.

Also on the stage bill will be Bennie Fairbanks, master of ceremonies, the "Scollayettes" in new dances, Frances Hart, ballerina, and Eddie Court, dance producer. Other big-time turns will complete the stage show.

"Just Imagine" Holds First Place at Fenway

Runs Gamut of All Emotions

FLORENCE REED

GROWS JUST 'LIKE TOPSY'

Like Topsy, the impersonations and mimicry of Vanita Gould, who headlines at the RKO Keith-Boston this week, "just grew." The vaudeville star started out in theatrical circles in the regulation sister act. From then on, states Miss Gould, her career, "just grew" into the star impersonator she is today.

Mimicry comes natural and spontaneously to this girl. Even when a child, she says, her mother could tell what children she played with when she did impersonations of them before her mirror, getting their habits and manners down so perfectly that they could easily be detected by one who knew them.

In her present vehicle, Miss Gould impersonates such notables as Ted Lewis, Blossom Seeley, the late Jeanne Eagels and Maurice Chevalier.

'SEA MONKEY' IS THE NAME

While "sea monkey" hardly seems appropriate as a movie star's name, that is the literal translation of the appellation assumed by Maria Rosa Amida Capdoviello, Argentine beauty who is known on the screen as Mona Maris and who plays a leading role in Victor McLaglen's "A Devil With Women."

"Mona" was the pet name bestowed on her by her father because of her mischievous habits at an early age, while her love for the sea and all things nautical caused her to adopt the alliterative "Maris" when she made her debut with UFA in Germany.

Don Cossacks to Give Second Concert

It is announced that the Don Cossacks will give a second concert in Boston before returning to Europe. They will sing in Symphony Hall on Monday evening, December 8. This remarkable chorus of 36 ex-patriate Russian officers who have been trained to precision and unusual color effect by Serge Jaroff.

BOOST DUE TO GIRL'S 'FIB'

A lie, not white but quite black, was the means by which Rita LaRoy launched herself on a stage career. Miss LaRoy is featured in Constance Bennett's picture, "Sin Takes a Holiday," which remains at RKO Keiths another week.

While singing and dancing in a little Bohemian cafe in Canada at the age of 14, Miss LaRoy attracted the attention of a director of a stock company. She wanted to join his players, but was aware that her age and lack of experience would prevent it. So she told him that she was 18 years old and had had four years stage experience. She got the job.

Plays Remaining

Florence Reed in "Purity" at the Plymouth. (Second week.) In which an excellent, hard-working woman mistakes one kind of love for another.

• • •

French's Passion Play at the Boston Opera House. (Second week.) The story of Christ presented as a dramatic spectacle. The last week.

• • •

Queenie Smith in "The Street Singer" at the Shubert. (Third week.) Americana abroad, set to words and music.

• • •

"Street Scene" at the Majestic. (Sixth week.) Life in a great city—all of it in and about a crowded tenement house.

• • •

"The Blue Ghost" at the Lyric. (Fifth week.) There's nothing like this if you want to raise a fine crop of goose flesh.

HENRY KING IS TO DIRECT JANET GAYNOR PICTURE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 6—Janet Gaynor has been away nursing a bad cold. One thing about a bad cold even in our sunny California, once it hits you this time of year it is hard to get rid of it. Janet writes home she is feeling fine and as soon as she has a little rest she will be ready to begin work again. With the knowledge that Fox has purchased "Merely Mary Ann" for her, it is enough to pep anybody up and make them feel like working.

"Merely Mary Ann" revives memories of Eleanor Robson to the older generation. Miss Robson has been married to one of the Belmonts these many years, but in her day she was charming on the stage, they say. I never saw her. "Merely Mary Ann," by Israel Zangwill, will be modernized, dramatized and adapted by Jules Furthman and J. M. Kerrigan. Mr. Kerrigan will also have a part in the picture. Cissie Loftus, the gal with the famous wink, has also been signed.

Louella O. Parsons

• • •

That boy, Joel McCrea, who seems to be the answer to many a maiden's prayer in Hollywood, is to have the lead in another RKO picture. I don't know what there is about Joel other than that he is very good looking, has a fine physique and a pleasant personality that wins all the "mmmmm." But I have never seen a girl yet who didn't take a second look at Joel and didn't consider him one of Hollywood's most desirable bachelors. Joel gets the lead in "Kept Husbands," but even more exciting is the rumor that Dorothy Mackaill will be borrowed for the leading role. Sounds like a big time number.

Few people know that John Barrymore has suffered a relapse since his return from the tropics. He was very ill in Central America and since he came home he has again had a vicious attack of jungle fever. It is difficult to treat a disease of which so little is known outside of the country where it is prevalent. Warner Brothers have put off talking about "Trilby," his next picture with them, until he is better. The unfortunate part of the jungle fever is that it returns year after year, a sort of low grade malaria which racks the body with chills and fever. All of Mr. Barrymore's friends are hoping that back in the land of sunshine once more he will be himself again.

Domesticity has kept Patsy Ruth Miller in the background more than any actress I know. Pat seems perfectly content to be the wife of a successful director and to let him be the prominent member of the family. However, most people felt that sooner or later she would want to come back to the screen and she has done that in agreeing to play a part in "Lonely Wives" at Pathe. That is the studio where Tay Garnett, her husband, has made a place for himself by his direction of "Her Man." Russell Mack is the director of "Lonely Wives," which is about to go into production.

A few little cheerful bits of news picked up here and there concern the new contract given Stanley Smith. His option has been taken up by Paramount following his successful appearance in Lew Holtz's New York show. Roland Young has been borrowed from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for "All Women Are Bad" at Fox. That is the William K. Howard number. Lawrence Gray, who does as much traveling around from studio to studio as anyone I know, is now playing the part of the son in May Robson's "Mother's Millions." This is a Liberty picture with James Flood directing. Florence Lake, young sister of Arthur, is reprising her work these days at Tiffany in "Drums of Jeopardy." Clara Blandick who played the aunt in "Tom Sawyer" is at the same studio in the same picture.

Funny how teams in the movies seldom last more than a season. Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, who have been RKO's most popular comedians and who have built a great reputation for themselves as a comedy unit are about to separate, so we hear. Each will be individually starred. The same is true of little Dorothy Lee, who has been leading lady in all their starring pictures. She made her debut with Bebe Daniels in "Rio Rita" and since then has been acquiring a nice following all for her little self. She has a new contract which, I am told, puts her into the moneyed class. Dorothy Lee's first under the new starring arrangement is "Off the Side," now being written by Tim Whalen.

A title these days, is as valuable as a scenario. Plays are bought just for the title. Some inspired soul at Paramount has renamed Donald Ogden Stewart's story, "The Haddocks Abroad," "Finn and Hattie Abroad." I suppose one fish is as good as another. By the bye, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's short on deep sea fishing with a man lecturing, has been much talked about. I didn't think so much of it until everybody started discussing it and then I went and took another listen. While I didn't think the lecturer's jokes particularly brilliant the picture was unusually interesting in that it gave instructions to potential Isaac Waltons.

Argentina is to make a second appearance in Boston when she gives a dance recital in Symphony Hall next Wednesday evening at 8:30. The great Spanish dancer, famed for handling the castanets like a master musician, announces the following dances for the occasion: Andaluzan Serenade, by Rucker; Jota by de Falla's ballet, "El Amor brujo"; Iberian Dance, by Joaquin Nin; Lagarteranas, by Guerrero; Goyescas, by Granados; Cielo de Cuba, a popular melody; Dance No. 5 by Granados; La Corrida, by Valverde; Dance from "La vida reve," by de Falla.

Mutual Burlesque Shows

Gayety

Beautiful Gertrude Ralston will be the featured performer of "The Jazz Babies," which opens Monday with the usual matinee at the Gayety. In addition to Miss Ralston there will be other feminine entertainers including Thelma Carlton, dancer extraordinary, and Dorothy Ahearn. All three can be relied upon to furnish something new and snappy. They will be featured in numbers in which the chorus will play a big part, and each one will offer a specialty of her own. The chorus, incidentally, is said to be one of the snappiest on the circuit.

Dorothy Ahearn

The featured vaudeville team is composed of Jess and Edith. Comedy will be handled by Bert Bertrand, Jewish comedian. Harry S. LeVan and Bob Snyder, a comedian of the eccentric variety, will also turn out the fun. Earl Meyers and Bobby Leonard will give new numbers. Holub's Jazz Hounds will have specialties. "Damaged Goods" is the big scene, and is said to be a funny skit.

Howard

At the Old Howard the "Powder Puff" Revue Girls hold forth Monday, in a program that abounds in novelties. This organization has two clever singing and dancing maids in Jean Williams and Midgie Brandon. They will contribute artistic steps. The chorus is made up of merrymakers who have talent. Sammy Weston and Lou Powers are rated high in burlesque circles and will contribute comedy. Another favorite will be "Mickey" Mays, the girl with a good voice. She is an accomplished violinist.

Midgie Brandon

The Boylans will be found on the bill. One of the big scenes will present "The Silver Garden," with the girls in a mechanical ballet. George Kinnear and Harry Allen are in the cast.

In addition to the burlesque the management will offer a worthy vaudeville and picture bill. The acts include Rogers and Wynn, in "Watch Dad," and Marie Blanc & Company, jugglers. Diegman and Ball are singers and pianists. The pictures will offer "Caught Short" with Marie Dressler and Polly Moran; also "The Melody Man," with William Collier, Jr., and Alice Day. The midnight show comes on Friday night.

'ROUND WORLD HE ACTED

Just what is happening to our stage can be gathered from practically any actor and theatergoer. But as to other theaters in distant climes, Walter Johnson, who makes life a little more difficult for Queenie Smith, as the cafe doorman in her latest musical comedy, "The Street Singer," now at the Shubert, has many tales to tell from his theatrical experience in odd parts of the world.

In India he found that all the theaters were open, in defiance of the elements, and that the performances never started before midnight because of the intense heat during the day. The paying section of the audiences sat in benches near the stage, and the natives were admitted free to sit in the back on the ground.

In China they started playing at 10 o'clock, for the law there says that the theaters must close not later than 12:30. This is doubtless a form of protection for the other places of amusement, for at that time their audiences there were Americans or English, and the other 10 per cent were the wealthy Chinese.

BROKEN RAINBOWS

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Wilda Gardner, bookkeeper in a hardware store, is in love with Logan Townsend, who "has not spoken yet."

He is no Adonis, Wilda thinks, but he has a rare smile. This smile also attracts Bess Avery, a stenographer in an office near Logan's. Wilda's mother, Garcie, has been strangely distracted since the father died. He is understood to have left much money and she plans to leave the poor little cottage in which they live in Boston and get in touch with a richer life. Wilda goes to house party where Logan is also invited.

By MAY CHRISTIE

(Copyright, 1930.)

LIKE an undercurrent through it all, like the deep, rich tones of a violoncello, was the voice that thrilled her—the dear tones of Logan.

The heart of Wilda said:

"Why fight against it so? You must admit—despite all your independent notions—that you're nothing but a 'one-man woman.'"

* * *

They had dined and talked. In the little gully below the house that led down to the sea the trees were casting weird, fascinating shadows.

A hush—an enchanted hush—now lay on all the world. It was as though everything waited.

Logan Calls

Love in Moonlight

Logan would take her down into that silence—soon. And, like a child under the hypnotic spell of the Pied Piper of Hamelin, who would follow him.

For when a woman loved a man in this year of grace of 1930 she was wise as Eve—intuitive and primitive.

"Wilda!"

"Hello, there, Logan"

Moonlight shone down upon them.

And Wilda's heart, as they climbed down the little gully towards the sea, beat, oh so violently, she was afraid Logan would hear it.

Conversely, the most catastrophic!

But she'd forgotten that. Forgotten what had seemed a dreary eternity of waiting.

Out in this North Shore night of June they were alone.

Alone with the glamorous moon shining down upon them!

Like the spiced odor of a thousand poppies! Love! The thing that has broken so many hearts—that men throughout the ages have suffered and died for!

That thing which makes the world go round—that is an ecstacy and purification—and a fire! That rapture that is not only of the body, but the spirit!

Why Do You Go?

Logan Inquisitive

And soon, soon she was leaving him! She was going away to Europe!

But that seemed far away. On this sweet night of June, with Logan close to her, it was tinged with a queer unreality.

And the little coppice close beside the sea, with the crickets humming in the grass, was filled with a dear enchantment.

"Hold on there! Something has caught your dress!"

Sweetness!

Love!

One laughed at it—pretended to ignore it. But it had a way of asserting its rights—of leaping up, as now, and confronting one.

That heady scent of flowers! That throbbing of crickets in the grass—insistent, like an Indian tom-tom.

"Wilda!"

"Yes, Logan."

Softly, like that, she answered

Long Seeks Two Tax Assessment Dates

Farmers Warned of Big Finance

TWO PAYMENT PERIODS ARE URGED, TOO

In Addition to Installment Plan He Would Eliminate Municipal Borrowing Need

Henry F. Long, state commissioner of corporations and taxation, today recommended to the Legislature that the assessment date for local taxes in all the cities and towns be changed from April 1 to January 1.

He also recommends establishing two payment dates, July 1 and October 1, and urges allowing part payments before these dates if poor people wish to pay in installments.

These provisions will relieve the cities and towns of short-term borrowing in anticipation of taxes, which borrowing cost them as a whole more than $4,000,000 last year, he said.

Interest as high as 6 per cent is paid for this short-term borrowing, he declared, adding that some towns arrange to borrow through local banks at lower rates but this cost of financing means that the outstanding obligation is greater than the cash they receive.

Drafts of bills embodying these proposed changes were submitted by him in conjunction with his recommendations.

DRAPER DRIVE COST $107,000

The primary expenditures of the Eben Draper Political Committee, filed today with Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook, disclosed the total to be $107,541.46.

This is away and beyond the combined primary and election expenses of the William M. Butler campaign, which reported roughly as having spent around $70,000.

The committee reported receipts of $102,782 and liabilities to its treasurer, Roger Amory, amounting to $4,759.46. This amount, the report says, will be reimbursed through future subscriptions.

The Constitutional Liberty League political committee, an anti-prohibition organization, reported receipts of $17,810.86, expenditures of $28,249.78 and liabilities of $10,438.92. This latter figure includes a loan of $6000 from Charles S. Rackemann and James D. Colt.

Prize Beef to Be Meals for Boston

America's best beef headed East today. All prize-winning animals both individual and carload lots of beef cattle in the International Live Stock Exposition, were sold at auction to the highest bidder. New York and Boston captured the cream with Atlantic City a close second. The Ritz-Carlton Hotel at Boston bought a load of prize-winning Angus cattle. All of the animals will be shipped alive to the East in time for the Christmas trade.

Indian Jailed on Firearms Charge

Robert Gardner, 42, a full-blooded Indian who claims he comes from the Indian camp at Mashpee, was arraigned at the Athen st. police station, South Boston, today, with an automatic revolver and a small tripod in his possession. He is being held to face a charge of carrying firearms.

Making the Most of Today's Dollar

Spending Our Income to Best Advantage Is Problem Today

(The fourteenth of a series of interviews with Massachusetts women leaders, giving their suggestions to those who buy goods and to those who sell them, concerning their mutual and vital problem of receiving and giving full value in every particular for every dollar spent. The fifteenth interview will appear in Monday's Evening American.)

By MRS. MABEL MANN JORDAN

President Professional Women's Club

WE ARE hearing women on every side discuss the subject of spending their incomes to the best advantage and we realize that this is a live topic of the day. In a country as rich as ours, with our banks overflowing with money, there should be no talk of hard times. The fact that there is such talk leads us to consideration of the problem facing so many people just now.

MRS. MABLE MANN JORDAN

This seems to be the time for every wage earner to look his income squarely in the face and budget it according to his needs. I am a great believer in budgeting, for I was taught in my youth that a girl had the same obligation in managing her home when she married that her husband had in providing the income for its upkeep.

We all know that it is better to earn lots and spend lots, but we know also that some of our income should be saved, if that is only 10 cents a week. That is the only safe and sane basis for any wage earner to go on.

The bottom of a lot of our trouble now is waste, although thousands do not waste, but make a small income produce more comfort than many others with large incomes enjoy.

I know a multi-millionaire who does not permit a light to be burned after the need for it is over, such as an extra light over the piano after the player has finished.

I suppose that it is natural to want to have as good things as those who have an income sufficient to buy such things. But until we do figure out our incomes to fit all our needs and not pour it all into one or two fine things to the neglect of the rest, we will have people living up to their entire incomes and unable to have even the necessities when they lose their jobs.

I don't want to sound preachy—I don't counsel hoarding—I think that people need to buy pretty things, need to set aside money for recreation and the cultural things of life; but we shall all be happier when we are forced to figure ahead.

Benjamin Franklin's saying, "Never buy anything you do not need just because it is cheap," might well be applied to shopping today. There are plenty of needful things to be bought—consumer and merchant can work together helpfully to make spending produce results that will help everybody.

(44 cash prizes, aggregating $550, are offered to college attendants, members of the Women's Trade Union League, retail store employes and office workers, for the best, brief letters commenting on any ten articles in this series. For further information write the Shopping Economics Editor, care of the Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq.)

Ten Men Arrested in Gambling Raid

Ten men were arrested and playing cards, tables and chairs seized today in a raid by Sergt. William Harrow and three patrolmen from headquarters on an apartment on the first floor of a house on Columbus ave., South End. Those arrested were all charged with being present where gaming implements were found. The raid was made on a search warrant.

Needham Wants Its Football Stuff Back

Needham high school has demanded of the Wellesley High School Athletic Association the return of one goal post, one football and 200 feet of rope, allegedly taken after the annual game between the two schools at Needham on Thanksgiving Day, it was learned today. If these are not returned, or reimbursement made, athletic relations are to be severed. Wellesley won the game 6 to 0.

'MYSTERY GIRL' RUM SPY NOT IN COURT

One of Four Trapped by Her Pleads Guilty, One Released, Two Cases Pending

The mysterious woman who acted as a spy for the rum squad of the Dudley st. police station did not appear in Roxbury court today, as one of the quartet she trapped pleaded guilty, another was found guilty, a third was released and the fourth was ordered to court later.

Out of the court proceedings, however, came the information that her name is Anna McLellan, and not Mary Jones, as Capt. James McKinnon had announced he would call her in official documents.

But either as Mary Jones or Anna McLellan, she still remains a mystery, much to the consternation of Roxbury rum sellers.

Joseph Vallis, arrested in a Washington street store, pleaded guilty to selling liquor and was held in $200, the case being continued to Monday because he said he was not the owner of the place. The owner is being sought.

Joseph Lee, arrested at a house in Cummings ter., was found guilty of possession and sale and fined $50. He also got a suspended sentence of six months. Beatrice Levangie, taken into custody at the same place, was found not guilty. The case of Elizabeth Stewart of Woodcliff st. was continued to December 12.

Burglars Get $20 From Concord Safe

Burglars who attacked the safe of the Whitney Coal & Grain Co. in West Concord early today in an unsuccessful attempt to break off the combination dial, finally dragged the safe into a grain shed and blew it open with nitroglycerine. They got $20.

Radio Talk Sunday on Christmas Mail

Assistant Postmaster William E Hurley will give a radio talk on postoffice problems stressing Sunday shopping and mailing, over station WEEI, tomorrow night at 9:10 o'clock.

40 in Plain Clothes Watch Xmas Looters

Forty plain clothes officers under Inspector John A. Dorsey went on duty in the shopping district today to guard against Christmas looters. The men were drawn from all stations. This method of reducing the annual losses by stores at Christmas time is an innovation devised by Supt. Crowley and Deputy Supt. James McDevitt.

$50 Weekly for News and Picture Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip. If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event, while it is happening. Pictures of unusual animal poses are wanted, too. Bring your action pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use in the American.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or an unusual event news tip received; $10 for the next best; $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips. Of course, the first one who turns in the tip in an interesting event receives the award on that particular item. Anyone who is alive and alert can win.

BOSTON TO HEAR EINSTEIN TALK

Boston will soon have a vivid demonstration of the "relativity" theory which Prof. Albert Einstein has made famous.

Prof. Einstein will be in Boston for Christmas—and yet, he will not be.

Relatively speaking, to quote the learned scientist, he will be here in spirit, but not in body. His voice will be heard, but he will not be seen.

A message of good-will is to be sent to Boston in a radio hook-up from New York, where Einstein will talk on the Palestine problem. The radio talk is directed to the Avukah, national American student Zionist organization, which will bring 500 delegates to Boston December 24, 25, 26.

Morris Michelson, Boston attorney, who is national vice-president, will go to New York to greet the scientist.

Savings Bank Assets Gain $72,270,752

An increase of $72,270,752 in assets of 108 savings banks in Massachusetts took place within the last year, according to a comparative statement of all banks made public today by the State commissioner of banks.

On October 31, this year, the total assets of all the banks were $7,317,981,499 as against $7,244,710,667 on October 31, 1929. In the same period deposits showed a decrease of $69,044,600.

URGE WOMEN TO FOLLOW POLITICAL ACTIVITIES

Former First Lady of Wyoming Sees Farm Relief as the Big Issue in 1932 Campaign

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, former governor of Wyoming and first woman governor in this country, attacked the policies of the Republican party today at the National Farm Women's conference in Faneuil Hall.

"It is the pitiful situation of the farmers during past several years that is in the most part responsible for the present economic situation," Mrs. Ross declared.

"When the buying power of the farmer was reduced the core of this country began to rot, she said.

REPUBLICANS BLAMED

The former governor claims that the Republican party has been chiefly at fault.

"It has been the belief of that party," Mrs. Ross declared, "that if they could make one class, namely the manufacturers, prosperous enough of that prosperity and good feeling would seep through to other classes and carry them along. But the Republican party has failed and our nation is in a deplorable state."

"Reconstruction must start in the home. Men and women need to investigate the situation personally. They need to draw their own conclusions and make their own political decisions. They must understand the platforms of both parties and make their own choice and then give all the support they can to the party of their choice. There has been too much ignorance and convention in politics."

WOMEN URGED TO HELP.

"Women can and must do a great deal to help the present day situation." Mrs. Ross continued. "I intend to devote my time to educating women along political lines. They are in need of it. When women learn to look into politics for themselves and desert the policies of their forefathers our country can look toward a new prosperity.

"I believe that the economic situation is going to find a great deal of relief in the Democratic administration which is coming. The Democrats have always been able to meet the changing demands of the people and I believe they can do it now. Farm relief will without a doubt be a chief issue in the next Presidential campaign."

2-Hour Earthquake Recorded at Harvard

An earthquake of moderate intensity was recorded at Harvard Seismograph station today beginning at 2:14 a. m. This distance from Cambridge is computed as approximately 4300 miles and the time and origin as 3½ minutes after 2 a. m., Eastern Standard Time. The record lasted two hours. The character of the record suggests South America as the probable scene of the disturbance.

Floating Night Club Is Sold for $1325

"Show Boat," formerly Boston's floating night club, was sold at public auction today for $1325, to satisfy complaints of creditors by order of the U. S. District Court. The sale was made to Maxwell Hurlin of Central st., Boston, shipbroker, who said he was bidding for a wealthy New York man, who intends to use the craft as a floating hospital for children.

Is East Going to Be Kicked Around Some More Today? | All Up to Rockne And Rough Riders From Notre Dame

Jones May Beat Knute With S. C. as With Iowa

Oh East is East, and West is West, and ever the twain do meet,
Wild, wooly West gives effete East, a healthy boot in the seat!

But there is no East or West, border, or breed or birth,
To Notre Dame, all teams look the same, 'though they come from the ends of the earth!
—Scrambling Kipling.

Another East vs. West duel today, Notre Dame vs. Southern California. If 1930 history repeats itself the Trojans will hand Rockne's Ramblers a swift kick in the center of egilibrium. All season long our Eastern elevens have been playing Missouri hounds to Western foes. Remembering Michigan and Harvard, Stanford and Dartmouth, Washington State and Villanova, St. Mary's and Fordham—no need of naming any more—the stalwarts from the tall and uncut have been smearing our boys something scandalously. Knute, you gotta stop 'em from kickin' our dog aroun'. If Notre Dame can't do it, who can? As Flagpole Kelly remarked to Bill Corum, if it took the Trojans 10 years to take the Greeks they hardly can be expected to take the Irish in 60 minutes.

On thing that can't be overlooked is that while for years other Eastern teams have been candy to the Coast Terrors, Notre Dame has been plain pizen. Four of the five times since the Four Horsemen climbed the Rockies and rode roughshod over Stanford, 27 to 10, Notre Dame has been successful over rivals from the sunset slopes of the Sierras. In three of four battles with the Trojans the corn-fed boys from Indiana brought home the bacon.

George Underwood

Each of those three Notre Dame victories over Southern California was won by the margin of a lone point. The Fighting Irish won 13 to 12 in 1926, 7 to 6 in 1927 and 13 to 12 again last year. The Trojans' lone victory was scored in 1928 by 27 to 14.

Southern California this year looks to have the strongest team in the history of the institution. To be sure, the Trojans lost by a lone point to Washington State, but that was early in the season. Pat Frayne, when he came East with St. Mary's, told us that if the Trojans and the Cougars were to meet again the Trojans would be 3 to 1 favorites.

Dartmouth was easy for Stanford, yet the Trojans buried Pop Warner's eleven under the debris of a 41 to 12 score. Southern California swamped California 74 to 0. Any team that has been snowing under the types of opponents the Trojans have this season certainly is a terror.

With 328 points in nine games the Trojans lead the entire country in scoring. No team has shown such a powerful offense. Against California the Trojans gained 764 yards from scrimmage. In nine games they made 1816 yards from scrimmage, for an average of 202 a game, for an average of 535 a game which Southern California lost to Washington State. Last year the Trojans outrushed the Cougars 227 yards to 257.

HOWARD JONES AGAIN!

Is the Howard Jones-coached Southern California eleven destined to break up the great two-year winning streak of Notre Dame today, just as the Howard Jones-coached Iowa eleven in 1921 ended a string of 20 straight Notre Dame victories by beating Rockne's team, 10 to 7?

Stranger things have happened.

Incidentally a little birdie from out of the West chirps that Howard Jones is going to sever connections with the Trojans after today's game and next year will be found coaching his Alma Mater in New Haven. Just stow that tip away, John Harvard, to be marked, labelled and remembered. Will it be Howard Jones and Eddie Casey coached elevens who will meet in the big Yale-Harvard battle here in the Stadium next November?

The odds are in favor of the Trojans, today but the East pins its faith on Knute Rockne. His Rough Riders of 1930 are as great as his Four Horsemen of earlier days. Fo, two years Notre Dame has refused to be beaten. They have ridden roughshod over all opposition and kept straight and true on the victory trail this season, despite a schedule almost any eleven would have cracked under.

Notre Dame showed signs of cracking against Northwestern and the Army but each time rallied in the sunset season and planted their banners on the enemy's ramparts. Notre Dame will not be licked by the Trojans today until the last whistle blows.

THE FIGHTING IRISH

So up and at 'em, Notre Dame! Faugh a ballagh and a couple of Erin go braghs for the Fighting Irish!

The Fighting Irish? Sure they're the Fighting Irish—

Lukanta's from the Lakes o' Killarney,
Carrideo is from Kildare;
Kaplan's a gosoon of Kilkenny,
And Schwartz comes from Clare.
Shecketski's a Limerick spalpeen;
Daskwich hails from Wicklow;
Bednd, an' I'll eat my corbeen
If Goldstein is not from Mayo!

Perhaps we should not attempt that bit of good-natured joshing about the "Fighting Irish" of Notre Dame. But it only was in the nature of the "cheer" the boys of the old Irish American A. C. in the days when the Men of the Winged Fist led the world on track and field, used to raise a laugh with. There were as many Jewish athletes on our team as there were Irish. So Martin Sheridan, a great an athlete and as loyal an Irishman as ever breathed, arranged a cheer naming the Jewish athletes, which went something like this:

"Kiviet, Rosenberg, Meyers,
Krapowicz, Prinstein — Irish!
Irish! Irish!"

Instead of taking the joshing in the spirit which it it given some of the Notre Dame boys think they must "rise to the defense." Recently our old pal, Arthur LeaMond, a Notre Dame alumnus, wrote us a mighty fine letter about his Alma Mater. Among other things Art said:

"The University was founded by French Catholic priests but in its entire growth it has been the most democratic seat of learning in the land. It has made no bars for race, creed or nationality. It is a Catholic institution which, for many years, has had many non-Catholics enrolled. It prides itself on being a university with representatives of every state in the union and with students from 26 countries. And, contrary to some opinions, it has always been a great developer of great American—and not all football players. In our list of alumni are presidents and other executives of the country's biggest corporations. We have senators, congressmen, envoys. Your own Congressman Granfield (from Coolidge's district) is the famous "Peaches" Granfield of Notre Dame scholastic and athletic history. Ours is a great institution, our teams are great and we have had a debating team which has not lost a debate in 15 years.

"The growth of Notre Dame football to its present place is a great compliment to Rockne who is a genius—but it also reflects credit on the faculty, the student life which does not allow fraternities and to the campus rule which places a poor, hard-working student on the same plane with the scions of millionaire families."

Spoken like a man, Art. But don't worry, we're all with you, all with Notre Dame, standard bearer of the East in the great football battle with the West. On Notre Dame the East stands or falls. If Notre Dame is defeated today, the East goes down with her—goes down in the most disastrous East-West football season the East ever has experienced. Up and at 'em Notre Dame! Faugh a ballagh! Clear the way!

Lexington Sextet Seeks Opposition

The Lexington Wanderers, a pro hockey club which last year won all except two of its dozen games, is back in harness and wants some opponents for this ice season.

IN CLIMATIC CLASH OUT ON THE GOLDEN COAST

ERNIE PINCKERT — MARCHY SCHWARTZ — RALPH WILCOX

ALL-AMERICAN halfback is Ernie Pinckert, above, who is expected to rip holes in Notre Dame's stalwart line out on the coast. Pinckert is the big cog in the U. S. C. backfield. He'll match strides, shifts, side-steps and speed with Marchy Schwartz. They are two of the best backs in the country.

TOM CONLEY

IRISH LAY SIEGE ON TROJAN STRONGHOLD. Here are a pair of Rocknemen who will be battling for Knute and the national title before 95,000 pairs of eyes in the Coliseum at San Francisco. They are Marchy Schwartz, above, and Capt. Tom Conley. Schwartz, by the way, is an Irish-German, despite the puns of the public print humorists.

KNAPMAN NEW TUFTS CAPTAIN

E. Victor Knapman, a junior of Lynn, was chosen captain of the Tufts football team for the 1931 season at the annual fall sports dance given in honor of the football and cross country letterman in Goddard Gymnasium.

Knapman is a 175-pound center and he has played a very consistent game at this position all season. He is the fourth man from Lynn in the last five years to be given this honor. He is a graduate of Lynn English as were all the others. He did not play last year due to scholastic difficulties, but this year he has been one of the most valuable members of the team.

Little Hope Held for Ban Johnson

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 6—The condition of Ban B. Johnson, former president of the American League, who is in St. Luke's Hospital, has improved somewhat from earlier in the week, but physicians decline to hope for his ultimate recovery.

Johnson is suffering from diabetes and hardening of the arteries and has been in the hospital here eight weeks. He has about recovered from an operation on his right foot a month ago, and physicians are undecided whether a second operation will be necessary.

Earlier this week it was feared Johnson's death was imminent, but he has shown considerable improvement since then. He is able to take nourishment. He still displays keen interest in baseball and has followed closely the proceedings at the minor league convention in Montreal this week, receiving reports from Phil Ball, owner of St. Louis Browns.

Ball, who stood by Johnson in his fight with Commissioner Landis, pays daily visits to the bedside of the man he still calls "Chief."

Frank Fullen Wins New Orleans Feature

New Orleans, La., Dec. 6 (US)—Frank Fullen had an easy time of it in the Campus Crossing Purse, banner number of the card. He charged to the front when the barrier was sprung, continued strongly and won with speed in reserve.

Madcap Marvin moved up fast when approaching the stretch but the best he could do was one in for second money. Hula closed resolutely and captured show money.

Simmons Was More Valuable Than Senator Joe Cronin

A bunch of the boys were whooping it up on their typewriters when someone asked them why not try to figure out who was the most valuable player in the American League of 1930. So these boys, who expert on baseball matters, went into a huddle, and, after considerable huddling, barked out:

That seemed to remind the boys about Simmons—but it then was too late. They had committed themselves to Cronin and thus perpetuated what many regard as a "boner" greater than Merkle's.

Freddy only forgot to touch second. The experts forgot to touch any. Based on the records—and that's the only basis for arriving at most valuable conclusions in baseball, Simmons was so far the peer of Cronin in both defensive and offensive play that comparison is hokum.

Cronin is the sparkplug of the Senators; Cronin is one of the greatest shortstops that has flashed into view in many years. It is all true that his stirring deeds earned him fame and a thousand tributes. But so long as the vote was on the question of who was the most valuable player in the American League, it seems that a great injustice was done a super-baseballer by a vote which accclaimed a flaming youngster as his superior.

Simmons Was Batting Champ

Simmons ended up as the batting champion of the league and champion outfielder. He outhit Cronin by the vast margin of 35 points. Playing in 16 less games than did Cronin, this Philadelphia wonder-man scored 25 more runs than did Cronin; he made 8 more hits; he whacked for 90 more bases; he made as many doubles as Cronin, twice as many triples and 22 more home runs.

In base stealing alone did Cronin excell Simmons, pilfering 17 while Al was snagging 9.

Around the American League circuit is conviction that a batter beat demonstrates his value to a team not by the hits he makes, but by the runs that he drives in. This is the league's real measure of offensive value.

After which it is found that Simmons, in 138 games, batted in 165 runs, whereas Cronin, in 154 shindigs, accounted for only 126.

But in face of all this indisputable evidence of Simmons' superiority, a group of men classified as baseball experts went into solemn deliberation and emerged from their ponderings with the weird conclusion that Cronin was the greatest American League player of 1930.

	G.	AB.	H.	SB.	AV.
Simmons	138	554	211	9	.381
Cronin	154	587	208	17	.354

COLLINS HOT AFTER WHITE SOX STAR

By JOE CASHMAN

It didn't take John "Shano" Collins, new Red Sox pilot, very long to prove to the other managers in the circuit that he knows his baseball in general and his Fenway outfit is particular.

He no sooner was introduced to the gang at the minor league meeting in Montreal than he discovered that Donie Bush, White Sox manager, had Willie Kamm, star third sacker, on the auction block, and he lost not a moment in offering Billy Regan for the Windy City's $100,000 beauty.

That started a free-for-All fight for Kamm's services. The Indians offered Joe Cashman

Joe Cashman

Lou Fonseca, veteran first sacker. The Yanks asked for time to decide who they would trade for him. The Browns put in a strong bid.

Bush said that he would wait until all returns were in before deciding where to ship Kamm, but he admitted that Collins' proposition was by far the best he had received during the early bidding.

It is almost too much to expect that the Sox will receive a fine third sacker for a mediocre second baseman but Collins, in making the attempt, showed that he knows the weaknesses of the Sox and is going to remedy them if he can, which is most encouraging to the fans who have grown tired of managers who are content to do the best they can with the material at hand.

Would Pull Sox Out of Cellar

Collins' troubles would be reduced 50 per cent and the Sox would be almost sure to get out of the cellar if Kamm could be secured for Regan.

The hot corner has been the Sox' weakest spot ever since Larry Gardner played his last game at the Fens a dozen years or so ago, with the exception of 1928, when Buddy Myer starred there.

Last season the Sox tried Reeves, Miller and Regan at the berth but none could fill the bill. Kamm has no superior in the league as a fielder and while he isn't a .300 hitter, he should stick much better in a new berth than he has in Chicago, where he is dissatisfied.

It wouldn't weaken the Sox much if any to lose Regan. The Pittsburgh boy is very good at times, but he is no longer able to play 154 games at big league speed and Reeves looked much better when he was shifted to the keystone sack late last season.

It is said that Bush would like to get a first-baseman. If they had to, the Sox could let one of their two first-sackers go and trade with Regan for Kamm and still profit by the deal.

We have our doubts about Kamm coming here, but now that Collins has shown he knows what he needs and is willing to make any change to improve the club, there is good reason for believing that he will put through some beneficial trades before the next campaign starts.

Bruins Invade Philly Tonight

Philadelphia will be invaded by the Bruins tonight. The Rossmen should win without any trouble. Last season the Pirates, who have changed their name to Quakers since their transfer from Pittsburgh to the City of Brotherly Love, were easy meat for the Bruins.

While Eddie Shore at his best the Bruins are apt to skate wild against the Cooper Smeaton club. This game should give the Rossmen their fifth victory and put them close on the Chicago heels.

Jack Johnson Tutor of "Tuffy" Griffith

Chicago, Dec. 6 (AP)—Gerald Ambrose "Tuffy" Griffith, peeler of heavyweight boxing laurels, is taking boxing lessons in preparation for his match with Ernie Schaaf, Stribling at the Chicago Stadium December 12—and from no less than Jack Johnson, former champion of the world.

Jack O'Keefe, Griffith's manager, has obtained the 52-year-old negro ex-champion to instruct Griffith in the more intricate defensive maneuvers at which Johnson, at his best, was matchless.

by Chalmers for N. Y. U. four yards from midfield.

Penalties broke up two attempts of N. Y. U. to get its running game under way, offsetting the hard running of Bob McNamara. The latter punted out of bounds on Colgate's 25 and the Maroon, with Macaluso and Hart lugging the ball quickly picked up 20 yards before N. Y. U. held and forced Hart to kick.

Bob McNamara put Colgate in a hole with a 63-yard punt, which Terry picked up on the goal line and ran back only six yards. Hart's kick from his own goal line then was run back to Colgate's 36-yard mark by La Mark.

MACALUSO MAKES 1ST DOWN

Score: Colgate, 7; N. Y. U., 0.

THIRD PERIOD

N. Y. U. opened the third period with a rush after receiving the kickoff Tanguay and Bob McNamara combined to lug the ball into Colgate territory, but the Maroon held and Bob McNamara's punt went outside at the 36-yard mark, and Colgate's captain, Hart punted out of danger to N. Y. U.'s 18-yard line.

Colgate got a break when Doyle, left guard, broke through and blocked Bob McNamara's punt, the Maroon recovering on N. Y. U.'s 31-yard line. After two cracks at the line, Hart's pass to Sullivan was incompleted and Bob Tanguay intercepted the next heave, running to N. Y. U.'s 21-yard line before being downed.

The rest of the period was consumed by a kicking duel between Bob McNamara and Les Hart, with the ball shuttling back and forth in violet territory. N. Y. U. returned one of Hart's kicks to its 25-yard line as the quarter ended.

FOURTH PERIOD

N. Y. U. gained 23 yards on an exchange of punts putting the violet in possession on Colgate's 45-yard line at the start of the final period. Tanguay's first pass was blocked down by Hart and Bob McNamara then punted across the goal line.

The New Yorkers battered their way to Colgate's 36-yard line, with the aid of a short pass from Tanguay to Hugret, sub end, but again the Violet terial attack proved a boomerang. Abruzino of Colgate intercepted one of Tanguay's tosses on the Marion 31-yard line and Hart punted deep into the opposing territory.

N. Y. U., set back to its eighth yard by Colgate punt, which carried 70 yards, tried to pass from its own goal line, Tanguay to Lamark, but the ball was fumbled. Tanguay then fumbled on his five yard line but recovered and on the next play kicked to Terry, who returned the ball to N. Y. U.'s 33 yard line.

With the end of the game in sight, N. Y. U. put over a spectacular touchdown on a march of 78 yards, featuring a 34-yard pass from Tanguay to Dunn, sub end.

Knowlton Chosen Springfield Captain

Springfield, Dec. 6—A product of the Winchester high school will be the next football captain of Springfield College. Heinie Knowlton, 22 years old, who played a prominent part in the 1930 season that saw the Red and White roll up 201 points and meet defeat only at the hands of Harvard, will captain the 1931 Gridiron forces on the field.

Knowlton, a halfback, has been prominent in football since he entered the local college, starting through his freshman, sophomore and junior years. He is a triple threat man, one of the best punters on the squad and probably the longest thrower of passes at the college. He weighs 163 pounds.

Wirneruk Has Edge Over Pete Herman

Lewiston, Me., Dec. 6—Stanley Winnerk of Lawrence gained the decision over Pete Herman of Boston before a packed house at City Hall, in one of the most torrid bouts in the history of the city.

The Lawrence battler went to the fore with the bell in the first round and proceeded to pile up some slight margin during the first three stanzas.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

ROLLIE CONNACHER

LO! THE POOR INDIANS when Reg Mackey, sturdy defenseman and captain of the Boston Tigers, and Rollie Connacher, center ice man, get a crack at them tonight. The Springfield Indians, who visit the Garden, are making a runaway race of the Can-Am Hockey League. Time to stop their procession say the Tigers.

REG MACKEY

TIGERS OUT TO STOP INDIANS

By BILL GRIMES

Strengthened by the return of Cy Wentworth, putting the Boston Tigers are confident that they will terminate the Springfield Indians string of victories tonight at the Boston Garden.

The Indians are one of the strongest clubs ever brought together in a minor league. They have stepped through six opponents this season without suffering a defeat or even a tie. They are the leading scorers of the Can Am organization, averaging almost five goals per game.

Springfield is a "farm" for New York Ranger players, but the two outstanding players, Joe Jerwa and Jack Beattie, are the property of the minor league club.

Jerwa and Beattie are two of the best players that ever came out of the Northwest. They were discovered by Art Ross of the Bruins and presumably purchased by the Bruins, but in some unexplained manner they suddenly became the property of the Springfield club.

Jerwa and Beattie are big leaguers. To send Eddie Shore and Cooney Weiland to a minor league organization would be just as ridiculous as assigning Jerwa and Beattie to play with Springfield. Like all Westerners, Jerwa and Beattie have experienced trouble getting acclimated, but they are now in fine condition and beginning to show at their best. Jerwa popped in three goals against the Philadelphia Arrows and will be closely covered by the Tigers tonight.

Espinoza and Sarazen Clash in Coast Tourney

San Francisco, Dec. 6 (U.S.)—Gene Sarazen and Al Espinoza meet in today's feature match of the $2500 open golf tourney.

Other matches today will bring together Espinoza and Von Elm, Diegel and Goggin, Fred Morrison and Joe Zeigr.

Sarazen made short work of Mark Fry winning by a five and four margin. He then took Willard Hutchinson to the same hole and won by the same score.

Espinoza eliminated Johnny Robbins after an uphill fight. He overcame a two-up lead, to carry the clever Portland amateur to the 19th green, where the match ended. Al had little trouble beating Benny Coltrin in the second match by a 3 to 2 edge.

Bruen's Services Confined to Miami

Miami, Fla., Dec. 6 (AP)—Frank J. Bruen, director-manager of the Miami Jockey club, will not serve the local club and at the same time act in an advisory capacity for the Havana Jockey club, Mat Farrell, H. Warburton, president of the Miami race organization, announced today.

"We did give Bruen permission to make such an arrangement," Maj. Warburton said, "but after thinking it over, Joseph E. Widener, chairman of our board of directors, and myself decided it best to withdraw our permission. Furthermore, we will insist that Bruen give his exclusive energy to the Miami Jockey club."

FORE RIVER MAY LOSE LEAD

Fore River leading the State league, will be opposed by the Victoria Mills eleven of Thornton R. I. in the most important soccer game of the week-end tomorrow at Fore River Field, Quincy.

The Rhode Islanders led the league race all season until last week when the Shipbuilders dethroned them by defeating the Morgans of Worcester, while the Mill eleven were standing idle.

A single point separates the elevens and a win for the Mill team would put it back in the lead.

City Employes in Charity Grid Game

Members of the Boston Street Laying-Out Dept., composed of the high school and college players, will clash this afternoon with the Sewer Department eleven in the Fenway Stadium. The proceeds of the game will be given the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund.

PERE ELEVEN IN CHARITY GAME

The Pere Marquette eleven of South Boston will journey to Leo Buckley's stadium in Peabody, tomorrow afternoon, to engage in a charity contest with the Peabody Elks.

The Peres hit their form a week ago when they held the Providence Steamrollers, one of the country's leading pro teams, to a six-point victory.

While the Careys were coming back from their Fitton slump the Peabody Elks were trimming the Quincy Trojans by a score of 12 to 0.

Peabody was weak at the start of the season but has picked up strength gradually and is confident of winning tomorrow afternoon.

A feature of the game will be a brother battle in the line between members of the Donahue family. Jack of Pere Marquette and Ed of Peabody Both are former Boston College linesmen.

FIRST PERIOD.

Navy kicked off to Masters on Penn's 10-yard line. Penn failed to gain. Splendid punting by Masters forced Navy deep into her own territory. Masters got off a 70 and a 65-yard punt, the second placing the ball on Navy's 10-yard line.

Two offside penalties against Penn and line-splitting bucks gave Navy a first down on her own 32-yard line. Masters stepped on Kirn's face, but the star back remained in the game.

On two fake reverse plays Kirn tore through left guard for 11 yards. Two more line smashes by Kirn and a short forward, Gannon to Steffanides, gave Navy the ball on Penn's 37-yard line.

It was fourth down and less than a yard to go. Navy refused to rush the ball and when Bowstrom's poorly placed kick went over the goal line it was Penn's ball on her own 20-yard line.

Masters fumbled, but Gentle recovered on his 7-yard line. Penn tried a running attack, but failed. Kirn fumbled Masters' twisting kick and Sokolis, Penn tackle, fell on the ball on the Quakers' 44-yard line.

Masters made another 35-yard punt, but this time Kirn returned it 16 yards to own 25-yard line. Although Kirn was gaining every time through the Penn line, Navy, the second time, elected to kick on a fourth down with less than a yard to go.

Penn gained the ball on her 25-yard line. An exchange of kicks following Masters' first poor punt drove Penn back to her 30-yard line as the period ended.

Score—Penn, 0; Navy, 0.

SECOND PERIOD

Bowstrom dropped back to the 43-yard line to try a placement kick from that point. His effort lacked distance and Penn put the ball in play on her own 20-yard line. After an exchange of punts Masters fumbled and Tuttle recovered for the Navy on Penn's 44-yard line.

Williams replaced Kirn and Bauer at quarterback for Navy. Gannon hit right tackle and was not stopped until he reached the 27-yard line. A flat pass, Gannon to Williams was good for 7 yards. Gannon again found a hole through the tackle and raced to the 12-yard line. Gannon and Williams added 14 more.

Kirn made one yard at center. On a trick play Byng, Navy right end, tried a forward pass, but Riblett knocked it down and it was Penn's ball on her 5-yard line.

Navy began another advance after Hurley, who had replaced Kirn, caught a punt by Gentle on his 43-yard line. Williams spun through right tackle for 11 yards, and Williams on two passes made another first down.

Edge of Penn secure intercepted a pass by Williams on his 20-yard line. Gentle threw a long pass to Munger and Penn halfback sped down the sidelines to Navy's 46-yard line a few seconds before the period ended.

Score—Penn 0, Navy 0.

THIRD PERIOD

Penn kicked off to the Navy. Neither team could gain and a kicking duel resulted. The Middies received a break when Gentle running parallel to the line of scrimmage, was struck by an unexpected pass from Engle, the center. Tuttle recovered for Navy on Penn's 30-yard line. A forward pass, Hurley to Williams gained 19 yards. Hurley landed Navy's first down in his tackle and plowed ahead for the 5-yard line. Williams plunged for two yards, Hurley smashed right guard for three yards and a touchdown. Bowstrom added the extra point.

Los Angeles, Dec. 6 (INS.)—In a setting that rivalled anything in the history of football, Southern California and Notre Dame today commanded the attention of the sporting world as they prepared to write the most blazing chapter in gridiron history.

Perfect weather was on tap for the game. A temperature under 70 degrees prevailed and no wind was forecast. A slight chance of rain was expected to add to the ideal conditions to prevent the glaring sunshine.

On the other was Southern California which though beaten by Washington State has been characterized by Howard Jones as the greatest he ever has coached.

Strange as it might seem, the defeated team ruled a favorite over the one with an unbeaten record, odds on the Trojans ranging from 1 to 3 to 2 to 1.

"I realize that without Joe Savoldi and Moon Mullins we haven't given up hope, maybe as it may be, and we'll be in there with no alibis, win or lose."

Marshall Duffield will start at quarterback for the Trojans and this was construed to mean that Jones would launch a forward passing attack early in the game such as he did a year ago when "Duffy" threw to Arbelbide for a touchdown on the second offensive play.

Although the Notre Dame mentor has said that a forward will only 65 per cent as strong as that of last year, he feels confident that Jones will not have the wide holes through the center trio of Kassis, Marr and Metzger.

Southern California's center of the line for the season is that of the Knute's lower for in Baker, Williamson and Shaw. The Trojans boast the only linebone of their team.

Layden, Irish general who has been in the game since he was a kid of football, and pals like a real to pounce on any short punt in the opposition. One misstep and Notre Dame.

In addition to his field generalship Coach Rockne is said to be a setback today for his punting, a feature in which he has excelled all year, particularly in the Northwestern game. Duffield and Shaver are good kickers, but their records do not begin to compare with that of the Notre Dame quarterback.

Jones dropped his orthodox methods in planning to stem the invasion of the Irish, and built some radically new plays to spring. "Erny" Pinckert, who was the mightiest Trojan of them all at Chicago last year, undoubtedly will be called upon to carry the ball more than ever.

Risko Beats Maloney in Close, Thrilling Battle

By JACK CONWAY

There was enough glory for both Johnny Risko and Jim Maloney in their furious 10-round bout at the Boston Evening American's Christmas Basket Show at the Boston Garden.

The official decision was Risko, but it could just as well have gone to Maloney as the m ing was very c ose. It was one of those hurricane battles which could have been called a draw and left everybody happy.

Draw verdicts however, are not permitted in Massachusetts And so Risko let the decision go. I believe Referee Joe O'Connor and Judges T Edward Dermott voted for Risko, while Judge William McMenamin decided for Maloney.

Jack Conway

The verdict in favor of Risko was quite a popular pleasu ow to the fan the bag" boys, who contend that Maloney cannot lose in Bosto . It proved that the officials call them as they see them

I do not believe that even Danny Dunn, Risko's manager, would have made a squawk if the decision had gone to Maloney. It was that kind of a fight, hard and close down to the final gong.

Risko's sensational showing was not a surprise to readers of this column who had been tipped that Rubbery Jawn was in the best condition of his career and very likely to come through with a victory. The astute Cleveland veteran is the kind of battler who always rocks the dope when the self-appointed mourners have him all ready for a journey to the pugilistic bone yard.

This writer's score card gave each boxer five rounds. Risko had the first, second, eighth, ninth and 10th frames, while Maloney was out front in the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh chapters.

Driving Finish Won Bout for Risko

In view of Risko's poor showing here against Daniels, it was felt in some quarters Maloney would trim him really. Those who held this opinion did not take into consideration the fact that Risko had spent three weeks at a camp up in the Erie getting ready for Shamus

Tex Rickard once named Rubbery Jawn "the Dastreger" on account of his uncanny ability to come through with victories over headliners.

The big fellows were well matched as regards weight. Maloney scaled 190 pounds, Risko 190. They both were physically fit.

The 13,196 fans who paid $17,737 to see the bout went into an uproar when Risko came roaring out of his corner at the gong in the first round. There was only one thought in Johnny's head. It was to knock Maloney out as quickly as possible

Maloney changed his style in the third frame. He weaved and bobbed and as he did so he cracked left and right hand punches to the body. Maloney stepped during a mixup in Risko's corner but got up at once. Risko dashed in as soon as Shamus was in position to fight. Maloney's body blows gave him the edge in this heat.

Rubbery Jawn came bolting out of his corner. He rained left hooks to the head and body. Maloney backed away, and took a right to the chin as he went against the ropes. Risko's mixup with close quarters Maloney's right went low but Risko wasn't hurt, and didn't complain. This was a big round for Risko.

Risko continued his spurt in the ninth round, but did not have things so much his own way. At times Maloney stood with him in the center of the ring and swapped furious punches. Risko was out front at the gong.

Crowd of 13,196 Paid $17,737 to See Fight

It is estimated that the Boston Garden's profit on the show will top $6000. Fifty per cent of this amount will be turned over to the Christmas Basket Fund ness gave him the margin. Referee Joe O'Connor and Judges Edward Dermott and Bill McMenamin decided for Maloney.

I had been a great fight like the Callahan-Fuller boxing bout and Sonnenberg-Sherry wrestling match, the two other Christmas Fund features, the show had furnished thrills and helped to boom sports in Boston

And, most important, 50 per cent of the profit of the show will go to bring cheer to the poor at Christmas.

Like Tiny Tim, those who will benefit from the generosity of the public and the assistance of the promoters, boxers and wrestlers, will bow their heads and say

Marie Gallagher of Roxbury was awarded the decision over Gene Stanton of Cleveland in the 10 round semifinal. The verdict didn't set with the approval of the fans and was booed

Six Classes on St. Joe Amateur Card

The amateur boxers will take up the battle of punches where Maloney and Risko left off when they collide at St. Joe's T. A. Society tournament at Mechanics Building tonight

There will be bouts at 115, 116, 126, 135, 147 and 160 pounds and in the heavyweight division

Tonight's show will make the opening of the Golden Glove tournament The winners will be in line to compete in the international bouts at the Garden

The Boston Garden has confirmed the Boston Evening American's exclusive announcement of last Tuesday that Ray Eblan, Philadelphia wrestling promoter, will stage shows at the local garden under a five-year contract. His first venture, in the nature of an all-star offering, will take place on December 19

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Any good putter on regular putting greens knows that you never hit the golf ball squarely in putting stroke

Instead you sweep swing the blade and let the blade stroke the ball away One of the first essentials in indoor putting is to get this principle thoroughly into your mind You won't be able to do much with the ball if you don't feel it yourself. That's just "batting it." That makes it go but does not make it roll. Since it is obvious that you do not have to stroke the ball hard to make it go the required distance, the thing to strive for is smooth stroking. You accomplish this by fixing your attention directly on the back of the ball and keeping it there. Forget the blade—see the ball and have your focus on the exact spot where you intend the blade to meet the ball as it swings back through it This, of course, after you have fixed your line and otherwise made ready to stroke. Let the blade swing through so smoothly and easily that you actually see it pass through the ball. The ball will then roll true and straight, and often drop in one.

Above and Below Sea Level Description Heard on the WEAF Chain at 1:30

FOR THE first time in radio's [illegible] microphone was the power [illegible] United States submarine [illegible] gave the radio [illegible] a vivid picture of [illegible] such a vessel [illegible] Such an event will take place [illegible] Navy Yard, New London, Ct., when the submarines O-8 and O-4 will [illegible] the maneuvers and NBC broadcasts the program from 1:30 to 2 P. M.

The Submarine O-8 will be piloted with George Hicks, NBC announcer, manning the micro phone in the submarine. James Wallington, also of the NBC announcerial staff, will s and before a microphone aboard the O-4, which will follow closely behind the O-8. A portable transmitter will be aboard the O-4 and a few [illegible] ning between the two crafts will be lashed with a microphone cable The word to be given by the announcers will be transmitted from the O-4 to a portable short wave station in New London.

Beginning with a running conversation between Wallington and Hicks the announcers will inform the radio audience of the submarine crew's preparation for submerging. Then Hicks will describe the descent of the crew into the interior Wallington will then picture Hicks' descent and only note the latter will take the microphone to tell the actions of the submarine crew beneath the surface At this time a torpedo will be fired and Hicks will transfer to Wallington who will trace the path of the speeding torpedo and the O-8's periscope shows through the wate.

NBC officials have been negotiating with naval authorities for over two years and the formal permission was obtained just a few days ago. The broadcast will be heard on a WEAF hookup.

"La Traviata," the beautiful tragic opera by Verdi, will be presented by the NBC over a network including WEAF, on a [illegible] night, from the Chicago Civic Opera house. The broadcast will fade into the action of the second act the episode containing the most melody and action. Included in the cast are Antonio Cortis, Richard Bonelli, Alice D'Hermanoy, Desire Defrere, Ludovico Oliviero, Eugenio Sandrini and Antonio Nicolichi

Concerning Radio

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

From three different sources there has come to us notices of a recent development in radio which is of considerable importance to the realm of broadcasting. We mention the fact to emphasize its apparent worth to the big guns behind the scenes in the industry. We shall quote from a dispatch by the International News Service:

"Among the most significant developments in radio during the last year was the plan of the National Broadcasting Company, in cooperation with the independent stations, WBAL, of Baltimore, and WTIC, of Hartford, for a synchronization test which will start within the next two months, provided the Federal Radio Commission gives its sanction.

The two independents will retain their wave length of 1060 kilocycles which they now share. In addition instead of remaining silent on alternate days as at present the transmitters of the stations will be synchronized with the NBC key stations in New York and will broadcast chain programs

WTAG will broadcast on the same wave length as WJZ, while WTIC will control half its transmitting time with WEAF The stations therefore will offer their listeners exclusive programs, provided the experiment is successful.

C. W. Horn, general engineer for the NBC, said that the synchronization of the two stations will culminate years of experiments by radio engineers. Success is anticipated although there are manifold difficulties including the necessity of highly accurate synchronization of the transmitters of the stations which will broadcast similar programs of the same wave lengths simultaneously.

"Big Brother" Addresses Students

Bob "Big Brother" Emery needs no introduction to readers of this column. Matter of fact, who doesn't know him? But what you may not know is that although he is one of the busiest young men in Boston he still finds time to lend himself to worthy projects, with no press agent trailing along to sing of his virtues.

It happened that we learned Bob was to address the more than a thousand students of Burdett College yesterday noon, so up we went to see him in action. Inside of having ninety pair of young feminine faces focused on us when we went into a class room to listen to a bigwig speaker we enjoyed it immensely

We really didn't know whether the grins on the dear girls' faces were caused by something about us or a couple of boy s with [illegible]

This is the third year that Big Brother has gone to the college and not only gave the students a worth-while address on what an education should mean to them, but he also entertained them in his own inimitable manner with songs and stories. And gratis, mind you!

Three brave explorers adrift on the ice in the far north after their balloon crashed, made a dash for safety and perished before reaching civilization. Thirty-three years later their bodies were found on White Island. Undeveloped films from Andree's own camera found in metal containers yielded a few priceless historic photographs which appear exclusively in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser with Andree's own story.

The 15 Greatest Dates in History As Seen by H. G. Wells

C. and touch upon the fifteen most important events up to the Russian Revolution in 1917. These dates are of international interest for the school children of Peru or Pekin as well as England and America.

"Mergers of Air Mail Lines Peril to Aviation," Says Rep. Kelly

Rep. Clyde Kelly, known as The Father of the Air Mail, believes that open competition in the air mail lines will promote faster progress in flying than the consolidation of aerial enterprises. Congressman Kelly sketches an interesting history of the air mail in his article in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Won't Talk

"He won't talk much, he's got a lawyer. Near as I can make out he was pretty drunk at some party or other over at this Digley's apartment—Digley was the man he shot. Mayor says he was trying to protect his woman, that Digley got her in another room and was attacking her. Can you give me any stuff about him, Dick?"

"Nothing against him."

"She called herself Elaine Mayor—don't know her name."

"Anyway, he told me that neither of them had any use for what he called 'marriage nonsense.' He was sort of dragged up down on Revere Flats, been hustling for himself since he was 13 years old—it's a shame, he had a chance to make something of himself."

"How about a little sympathy for the party he killed?"

"I don't know, Sid. Mayor struck me as a chap who was pretty decent, not the cold-blooded killer type, but there's no telling what a fellow will do in a fight about a girl—especially if he's full of this rotten prohibition hooch."

Rheumatic Fever in Youth

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

NOT SO very long ago there was very little accurate knowledge about rheumatism and its causes. It was generally supposed to afflict only the aged, and to be caused by exposure to wet and cold.

Dr. Copeland

Today, physicians know that it attacks even the youngest children, and that it is a sign of some infection in the system. What used to be known as "growing pains" in children are now recognized as symptoms of rheumatism.

Rheumatic fever is an acute form of rheumatism. Not only is the pain quite terrible, but there is danger of the heart being involved. This is what makes rheumatic fever dangerous for a child.

One medical physician has said that half the ailments of mankind come from bad teeth. Well, this may be true, but sinus trouble, the poisons of the intestinal tract, diseased tonsils and adenoids exact their penalty in ill health. Rheumatism is a common symptom of any of these troubles which produce poisons in the system.

A recent health survey was made in Rochester, N. Y., of a group of 2100 children between the ages of five and 15 years. These children had had their tonsils removed and only 30.5 of them developed acute rheumatic fever.

The survey of a similar group of 2000 children, whose diseased tonsils were not removed, showed, as compared to the former group, that 630 of them developed rheumatic fever. Out of the first group the children whose tonsils were removed, 1267 had "growing pains," while of the second group those not operated upon, 1350 had such pains.

In brief, the symptoms of rheumatism vary a good deal. If the trouble is in the joints, the symptoms are mild. A dull, restless appears in the region of one joint, and this may be preceded by a little fever.

Even in mild attacks children should be kept in bed and warmly covered. There is much more danger of the heart being affected in the case of a child than that of an adult. Sometimes even mild cases of rheumatism are accompanied by inflammation of the delicate membrane lining of the heart. This is called "endocarditis." Keeping a child in bed will help to prevent such a heart complication.

If you find in your child any of these symptoms, you should get the advice of a competent physician. He will give temporary relief, and, what is more, he will find the cause and try to remove it. Nowadays, there are splendid clinics where children may be treated free, or for a small sum. It is only right that every child should have from earliest infancy the best of medical care, so as to prevent such painful ailments.

HONORABLE MENTION

While visiting my sister in the country I missed my little girl and going out to look around the grounds for her, asked my little niece if she had seen her.

Avis, who was just 5 years old was given some money to buy a doll. When she returned with the doll, her mother noticed it was imperfect, having a large bunch on the side of its face, the nose was also crooke l.

"Why, Avis," said her mother, "that doll is so homely, couldn't you get a prettier one?"

"Yes, mother, there were some beautiful ones there but this doll by was so homely I pitied it," answered little Avis.

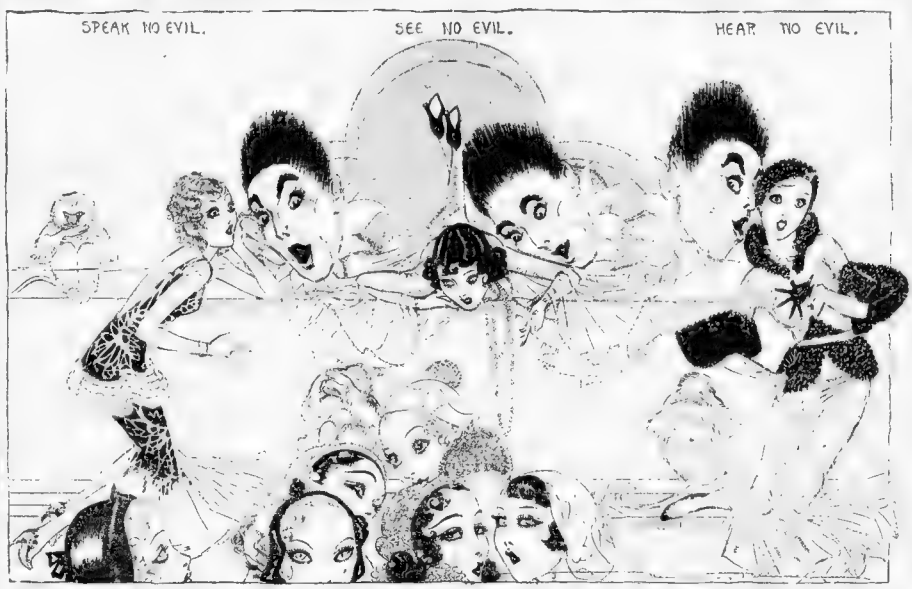
OLD BUT STILL GOOD

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



SPEAK NO EVIL. See no evil. Hear no evil. That is an old-timer indeed; older than the religion that built India's temples of frost-work stone. Maybe the dreaming, painstaking little dark-skin who carved the first three monkeys, each with tiny hands covering mouth eyes and ears, struck in an eternal, motionless pose, found it new and something to think solemnly upon. But before him, who made the knowing sentence first? Truth seems to have been in the world even before the first man knocked his head with bl knuckles scowled and thought. Truths were [illegible]ting about in the air and water and earth ble[illegible] were lovely and terrible and marvelous spirits with the famous magic cape of that make you invisible. Sitting about waiting to be seen. And when a man first saw a truth for himself he jumped up and down and bellowed it aloud to the world. Each young man and girl through colorful ages is like the first man and woman. When they are about twenty and begin to knock their heads with their knuckles, scowl and think, and thinking, either see for themselves or are shown, a truth old enough to make a person dizzy but bright and new to the boy or girl, then THEY jump up and down and cry their find to the world.

Here an old truth—old? Ante shortsighted I reckon. Speak no evil. See no evil. Hear no evil. But if you really think about it for a minute of your effervescent days, you'll find it good as new.

This is a time of talking personalities. Human [illegible]s come to us by human—for humans are doing fascinating things. And it is hard to spend hours over tea or luncheon table around a fire on a long ride, in the company of human-living and taking talk about other humans and say nothing ILL of them. But it can be done. And to do it as nearly as you can enriches your mental and spiritual pocket-book.

There is a man in New York, an artist on this newspaper who see name everybody knows up and down and cross-ways of the country, who does not know that one of the things he is famous for is this. "I never heard him speak ill of anyone." That phrase pops up when ever he is spoken of. She Wonders if Boy Has Left Forever

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am a girl of 19 and am in love with a man four years my senior. The trouble is that I can't tell whether he loves me or not. He has asked me out three or four times and has treated me wonderfully. I think he would ask me out more if it wasn't for my brother with whom he lives. Sometimes Miss Fairfax, I think he does love me and then again I don't know. He has gone home to his own home now and I don't know whether or not he is coming back or not.

BROWN EYES.

Beatrice Fairfax

Dear Brown Eyes: You mustn't let your romantic impulses run away with you. Perhaps this man only likes you in a friendly way and is being thoughtful and attentive because you are the sister of his room-mate. The best antidote for hurt feelings is to find another admirer. If he doesn't love you you are sparing yourself much pain by forgetting him now, and if he really does love you the competition may wake him up.

Go Back to Him

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am nearly 20 years old and divorced. I was married at 16. I am just crazy over children. I would give anything in the world to be a mother. I love them so much that I cry many nights when I go to bed because God did not bless me with at least one by ex-husband still cared for me. Do you think I should marry him again or keep on waiting to fall in love with someone else. I don't think I will ever even care for anyone as much as him. He was my first beau. I think your columns are wonderful, and I am thanking you now if you will please answer mine. BABE.

Dear Babe: What a foolish little girl to cry yourself to sleep over something that could be fixed up in a minute. If you'd just swallow your pride and go back to your husband. If you love each other, there is nothing in the world to keep you apart, is there? Just write him or call him up today and be happy again. You've heard of the story of the man who searched in far countries for the miraculous flower that grew at his own doorstep.

But now she moved, moved, [illegible]

BROKEN RAINBOWS

lum. Like primitive Eve in the Garden of Eden, to Adam

"Why the devil—the absolute devil—are you going away abroad?"

She said mechanically: "Because Gracie—my mother—insists. You know the sort of things she says—about meeting the right people—culture?"

"Culture be d—d! You're all right as you are! I wouldn't have you one bit different!"

"Why, Logan!"

"Don't act surprised, Wilda, you must know—you do know—how I feel about you."

Oh, heavenly music in her ears! Was it the surf against the shore? Or fairies dancing in the moonlight to beguiling harmonies?

"For months—you've never given me a chance. I've been just crazy about you!"

Crazy! Had she gone mad herself? If so, never, never, return to prosaic sanity!

"Yes. Please go on" Was this her usual "efficient" voice? It crooned like the waves of the Atlantic.

"I mean it, girl. The thought of you going away so far—it's torture."

He felt it—just like that! Then he must feel, blessed realization, that she'd feared to grasp!—he must be in love with her!

"Say You Care!"
Logan Begs Her

And she was tongue-tied. In this magic hour, because of her breath-taking happiness, she had no adequate words with which to answer him.

She said in a queer, stifled tone, that didn't sound a bit like hers:

"Why—why—Logan—"

"Wilda! Come close! Don't be afraid! I love you, Wilda!"

Was it a dream? Was that his voice? Was she really on the earth?

He whispered: "Please tell me that you care." That you aren't playing with me, Wilda."

Oh! Have the woman's wits to keep confession back. Maintain reserve. Don't tell him everything—of the anguish—and the waiting.

She wouldn't. Must not.

Myrtle!

But now she moved, simply because she could not help it, close to Logan.

"Wilda! You care? My sweetheart!"

* * *

"I've wanted this—for weeks—for months, Wilda, I've been afraid of you"

"Afraid?"

"I guess because I cared so much. And you were always out of reach—so unattainable."

"Keep IT. I was distant to you—as you say—that didn't mean I didn't like you, Logan"

"Like? That cold little 'like' I haven't got the words to tell you how I feel about you, Wilda, darling!"

And the sea splashed on the rocks. And the honeysuckle smelled so sweet. And the moonlight, beyond the radius of the trees, was an enchanting aura.

The most beguiling words in the dictionary—or the Book of Love—"I'm crazy about you."

No longer could she try to steel her heart against him. In the shadow of the trees, beyond the radius of the moon, even the very dark was starred with a bright happiness.

This love! Drawing them irresistibly together.

"Give me some hope? Tell me you care—even a little bit the way I care—Wilda?"

Oh! they were one, were as steel to magnet — riveted together.

Words got all tangled up. Joy almost akin to tears was a big ache within her.

Logan had loved her all along . . . while she, poor foolish "doubting Thomas" that she'd been, had been so miserable.

It was like being brought into a warm, lighted room after starving for ages in an icy wilderness.

He was lifting up her chin, now so that his face was close to his.

Ah! now now he was going to kiss her.

Emotion caught her like a flood. She closed her eyes yielded her lips. From head to foot her whole being was a-tingle with her love for him.

* * *

"I—I promise, Logan—"

And time itself seemed to stand still in the presence of the eternal, unchanging miracle!

"You'll meet all kinds of chaps abroad. I'm scared whenever I think of it, Wilda."

"Then don't think anything at all."

Gladness enveloped over her.

And all about them was the throbbing beauty of this night of nights. The sea sighing and calling. And crickets humming.

* * *

A shaft of light from the house threw a golden beam for a moment, then [illegible] opened the front door [illegible] one was calling them.

"Hi, there, Miss Gardner! Logan!"

Logan mutte[illegible] confound them.

"But we'll have to go. Wasn't there something said about us all going over to the country club for a late supper?"

"Umm. And we've got to change. I s'pose. Don't you think we could dodge it, Wilda?"

"And stay here? They'd think it terrible—"

One More Kiss
As They Go to House

"Quick. Let me have another kiss. Darling, I'm just crazy about you—"

In that yellow shaft of light from the open door she saw his eyes. Those handsome blue, blue eyes of his like magnets drawing out the very soul of her.

* * *

Wilda went over to the looking glass. Her cheeks were flushed into an exquisite pink, her eyes were starry.

"Got you there? Out came the murky secret." Coral gave her friend a whimsical look. "I guessed when he saw you in that ravishing little suit—and don't forget I forced it on you—he'd go all goosey!"

"What d'you mean?"

"Merely that I wasn't born yesterday, sweet child. Also, that there's something doing or brewing when a handsome young man and a girl disappear for ages into a moonlit gully—"

Our Bankers Doing More Than Revealed

By B. C. FORBES

New York Dec 6—I am inclined to take back some of the criticism voiced by myself—and others—of New York bankers for their apparent utter lack of leadership.

Delving into matters, I find that they have been doing a great deal more than I realized. New York bankers have not been content to sit idly by and watch the stock market crash and business slump. They have been working overtime, behind the scenes, to bolster up weak spots and to prevent threatened trouble.

Bankers as a class are seldom given public credit for their good deeds. Perhaps they ought to be censured, it would be found that this banking firm has rendered invaluable public service without publicity, or that the other has averted panic.

The real inside story of what has happened since the panic would make thrilling reading, but would put some of our leading bankers in a different light in the eyes of the public.

Happily, confidence is steadily taking headway that a definite turn for the better in the security market will soon be under way. Such a headway as public confidence have made in the past few days ought not to be lost. Signs multiply that the worst is over. Such signs multiply that a rebound will come in the not distant future cannot be doubted.

Owen D. Young's speech at the Lotos Club, read in cold type, conveys little of the charm it contained for the listeners. Mr. Young has three enviable possessions: a wonderful brain, a modest personality, and a winsome smile. He talks as he thinks, and thinks as he talks. He is himself.

STOCK PRICES ARE LOWERED IN WALL ST.

New York, Dec. 6—All sections of the stock market settled down to a lower level of prices at the week-end as the result of steady and persistent selling of rails, oils, steels, utilities and specialties.

New York Central, Frisco, Erie and other well-known rails sold at the year's lowest prices, as also did a number of the well-known specialties including Eastman Kodak.

PRESSURE IS STEADY

Except for a brief period in the second hour, the flood of small selling orders pressed on the market without a letup and little rallying power was exhibited in any section of the list.

A few leaders finished fractionally above the day's lowest prices.

Railroad stocks were under pressure until the final gong, and most of the active rail shares were at new lows.

New York Central at 124¾ showed a loss of 1¾ and a new low price for the year. Baltimore & Ohio was down a point, at 71½; Pennsylvania, down ⅝ at 40¾; Atchison down 2¼ at 183¾ and Southern Pacific down ¾ at 80⅞.

UTILITIES LOWER.

Consolidated Gas, at the head of the utilities, sold off 1⅞ and closed at 85. American & Foreign Power lost a point at 38, and Commonwealth & Electric down ½ at 35⅝.

Allied Chemical sustained a 4-point loss at 190. United States Steel closed at 142⅜, down 1⅝; Bethlehem at 59⅝, down 1½; American Can at 114, down 1¾; American Telephone at 184½, down 2; Westinghouse at 87⅝, down 1¼ and Vanadium at 31⅝, down 1⅜.

Trading was in light volume, but losses of 1 to 5 points were common, although few decline exceeded 2 points.

In the main, final prices were lowest of the day, and the lowest of the week. The list opened about steady, but grew increasingly heavy throughout the two-hour session.

An encouraging aspect of the week-end reports was the increase shown in the volume of bank holdings, presumably indicating that holiday requirements for funds are being met in fair volume. In 22 leading cities the decline from last year was less than 2¼ per cent, the smallest in several months. Recent weekly declines have averaged about 30 per cent.

The sag in Allied Chemical stock seemed to be attributable to nothing new in the situation, for the issue is always a wide mover. Financial news tickers printed an estimate of 1930 earnings of better than $12 a share, or about what was shown last year.

ANTI-KNOCK GAS NOW ON SALE

Philadelphia, Dec. 6—Production of a new highly volatile, anti-knock gasoline, made for instant starting in any weather, is announced by the Atlantic Refining Company. Known as "Atlantic White Flash," the new fuel is the result of a year's research, and will accompany automobile engine developments for the next five years, according to a company announcement.

"Atlantic White Flash" will be sold at no increase in cost over the older gasolines. The characteristic of instant starting, the company points out, will mean considerable economy in the operation of a car, since 1" of amount of gasoline wasted in starting a motor is a major factor in determining mileage. Another new fuel retains its starting efficiency at 40 degrees below zero.

Radio science made possible development of the anti-knock gasoline, the time that the "white flash" has been enlisted to pry into the secrets of combustion. To the extreme sensitivity of vacuum tubes and delicacy of the microphone, chemists ascribe their success in devising a gasoline so free from knock-producing characteristics.

An "electrical ear" is used to measure combustion sounds. This instrument, perfected after many months of research, is a combination of unusually sensitive microphone, radio vacuum tubes, sound filter and meters and other electrical devices evolved for this particular work.

In operation, it is suspended near the test engine and, because of its special construction, is sensitive only to engine "knocks," which in turn are further magnified by special amplifying circuits. The result is a sensitive instrument that amplifies the slightest whisper of a "knock" a hundred-fold.

As soon as this instrument had been perfected, others were constructed and all are now in use at the company laboratory to test every batch of the new fuel to insure that the anti-knock characteristics are being maintained. Cars and trucks of practically all makes were driven thousands of miles during the past year in practical tests of the efficiency and characteristics of the new fuel.

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

The Mess in Europe

He declares France will precipitate it for the purpose of crushing Germany; that Germany will probably have the help of Italy and England; but that France, nevertheless, will be victorious and will dominate Europe.

Ludendorff may be mistaken in the date. If, however, there is any logic in history and any meaning in facts, Ludendorff is not mistaken in the rest of his prediction.

France not only plans to crush Germany, but is crushing her now, and has been crushing her ever since the German delegates were forced by the French in 1919 to sign the Treaty of Versailles.

At Versailles, France imposed an impossible scale of reparations on the German people. She did not believe then that they could find the money to pay, and she does not believe it now.

Referring in round numbers to the average annual payment that Germany is called upon to make, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, former president of the Reichsbank, said:

"Germany cannot pay the five hundred million dollars (per year) demanded of her over the next sixty years on top of the $35,000,000,000 already taken from her."

(As estimated by our Treasury Department, Germany is expected to make an average annual payment of more than four hundred and seventy-five million dollars for fifty-eight and one-half years.)

None can doubt that this staggering burden, besides dragging Germany down into the depths of financial depression, HAS BEEN A TREMENDOUS FACTOR IN THE WORLD-WIDE DEPRESSION WHICH NO NATION, EXCEPT FRANCE, HAS ESCAPED.

France firmly believed in 1919 that Germany would be broken down and ruined in the attempt to pay, and what France believed then is now perilously near fulfillment.

For the last eleven years Germany has been held in a state of involuntary servitude, while France has been taking everything that this servitude has produced.

In the event, however, that Germany does not break down soon enough under the burden of debt that France has forced upon her, France apparently intends to break her down by war.

She hopes to profit as much from the next.

That is why she is eager to create the conditions that will seem, no matter how speciously, to justify war.

If anyone considers that an extreme or sensational statement, let him read the solemn warning of former Premier Lloyd George of England, published in the Hearst newspapers of November 23, this year.

Speaking of French strength and German weariness, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"There is only one way to reduce armaments, and that is by limiting the numbers and the equipment of the forces that can be put into the field by each country in the event of war.

"If war were declared by or against France, she could put into the field, fully equipped, a force of several millions of men."

Mr. Lloyd George further said specifically that this force, together with those of France's military allies, IS ESTIMATED AT TEN MILLION MEN, AGAINST WHICH GERMANY HAS AN ARMY OF 100,000.

"A more startling phase of the position of Europe," Mr. Lloyd George adds, "is that the equipment of these millions would be INCOMPARABLY MORE POWERFUL AND DESTRUCTIVE THAN THAT OF THE GERMAN ARMIES OF 1914."

France is now the military tyrant of Europe. She has the men, the guns and the money.

She has Germany's money and OUR MONEY.

Meanwhile, she arrogantly withholds payment of the sums we lent her in her hour of direst necessity.

The aid was effective, the necessity has passed, and the OBLIGATION IS FORGOTTEN.

France knows her own strength and intends to make the most of it. She will aim the death blow at Germany when the time is ripe, she is determined not to "rule or ruin," but to RULE AND RUIN.

As for other nations, and particularly the creditor nations, her attitude is "What are you going to do about it?"

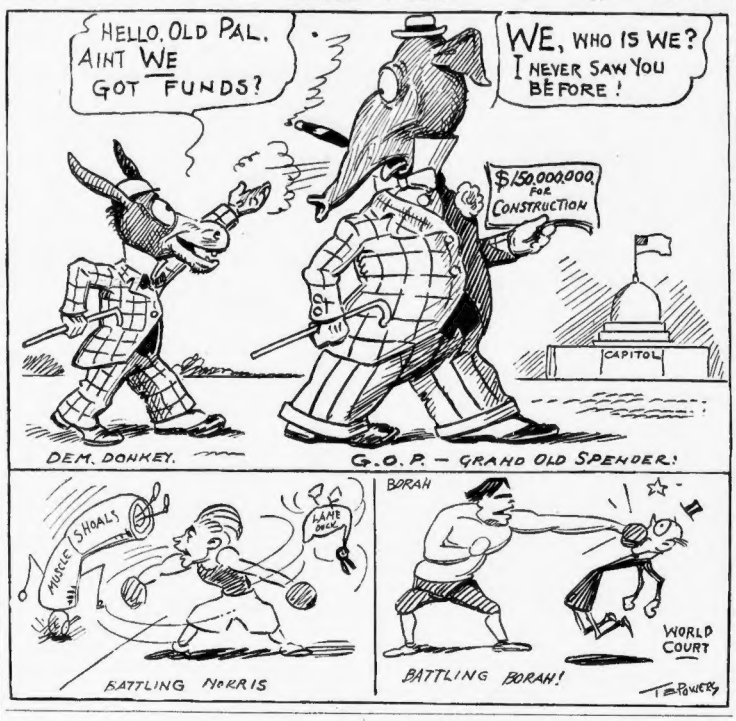
George Washington was looking toward the European spectacle when he asked:

"Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice?"

The European spectacle of his day taught Washington that our true policy for all time was "to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world."

If the American people have the wisdom to follow the counsel and heed the warning of the Father of His Country, THE EUROPEAN SPECTACLE OF THEIR OWN DAY WILL TEACH THEM THE SAME LESSON.

HOW DO WE GET THAT WAY? -:- By T. E. Powers



Listen, World!—Grief

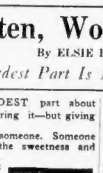
By ELSIE ROBINSON

Hardest Part Is Not Enduring It

THE HARDEST part about grief is not enduring it—but giving it up.

You've lost someone. Someone who gave all the sweetness and meaning in life.

And your heart is broken. Terrible days! You wake, you sleep, you go about your work. It's all the same. You're in a daze of misery—drugged by sorrow. You're as truly dead as that dear one who has gone. You're sure that life will never come back again.



Elsie Robinson

And you don't want it to come back. You don't want to live with your darling gone. But it does come back. Without your knowing it, without your willing it, against all your desire, life comes back. Creeping slowly, rising softly, in a tide, life comes back. You have an appetite again. You can sleep. You feel a stirring of interest in a new hat, or the latest football score. You haven't forgotten love—your grief is just as great. But life has taken hold of you again. Life is needing you, clamoring for you, demanding that you take your place. There are the old responsibilities to be taken up again. There is that new duty which you have avoided, which your friends have helped you avoid, during your black hours. They're waiting for you—

Reluctantly you realize this. But you turn your face away. You don't want to take up those responsibilities again. You don't want to come back into life. Why? You say it's because your heart is broken. And you believe that.

You believe it because you want to believe it. Unconsciously, grief has become a convenience!

It has become an escape from people and things you do not want to face. It has become an alibi for selfishness and laziness and cowardice. If you did not have that grief, if you laid it aside bravely, you would have to mingle with the world—you would have to face competition and criticism. But, grieving, you can lock yourself away, you can hide in your sorrow. And no one will dare condemn you for doing so.

"Poor Sally," they'll say, "she's never been the same since Billy died. It's wonderful, and tragic, to love like that."

And, hearing them, you'll not only feel excused—but you'll feel that you are set apart by your great disaster—that you're not like other people—that you should be pitied and honored because you cannot, will not, come back into life.

But of course the truth is—you deserve neither pity nor honor. Chronic grief isn't beautiful—it's cowardly and contemptible. We've no more right to use grief as an escape than we have to use alcohol or morphine or gambling.

It's bad to pity broken hearted people too much or too long. It's bad to let them pity themselves. I know. My heart was broken and people pitied me IT NEARLY MADE A BUM OF ME.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Early Days in Gallipolis

NEW YORK, Dec. 6—After 16 years, the Gallipolis, O., Tribune begins printing these daily trivialities, which again emphasizes America as the land of opportunity. All one has to do is work hard, keep a stiff upper lip and eventually worth will be recognized.

I was once a Tribune carrier on what was known as the lower route. From this inconspicuous post, and with practically no pull, I became "the" reporter. It would be tiresome to recount the struggles upward, but suffice it to announce I now represent the paper in New York.

Already the thrill of recognition is apparent. A post card from there reads:

"I am glad to see you working on the Tribune again. We often wondered what became of you."

There were times in the early Tribune days when my future hung in the balance.

Serving as the Tribune's dramatic critic and also as usher in the local opera house—there was practically no way of preventing me seeing a show free—I wrote of an offering "direct from its New York engagement":

The next day the lady herself breezed into the sanctum. Slapping the paper on the table and pointing to the article, she shrieked:

* * *

An hour later it was relayed to me in the hay-mow of Maxon's barn a mile from town that the lady had a snakeship and a wicked gleam in her eye. And was walking up and down in front of the Tribune office. From then on my reviews were disgustingly flattering.

* * *

Then there was my slothful custom of sleeping late. Frequently Grandma would shout up the stairs, long after the entire town was astir:

"If you don't stop going so late to that printing office they are going to turn you out!"

* * *

Reporting a small town's goings and comings, sicknesses, deaths and births had more of excitement than many realize. Our problem was not one of news selection, such as in the city, but of rounding up enough news. I had one stand-by in the emergency to fill the personal column. It was:

It might be repetitious, but it was not faking, for Mr. Robinson never failed to come to town every week day.

* * *

Two fertile sources of news in those days were the Park Central hotel and Noah Clark's Ark—a sort of stage coach that brought the country folk down the river to town. The Ark provided a half dozen items and the hotel register was prolific. I recall one gentleman's name on the hotel register that stood out. He came from Kentucky and his name was Basil Duke. During the period when I determined upon the stage as a career my footlight moniker was to be "Basil Duke." Come to think, it still sounds rather grand!

* * *

Major Burke, with his Buffalo Bill hair, plaid vest, silk hat and 30 karat sparkler in a red puff tie was a big yearly event in the journalistic life of a small town. He was the famous circus press agent and scattered complimentary tickets among us like hail. He would make us feel worldly by inquiring: "Have you been to New York lately?" Although a dollar excursion to Columbus constituted my contact with the outside world, I would always reply: "Not lately!"

* * *

In our town a reporter was not known as a reporter. Years after I lit a shuck for the city I met a Gallipolis resident. He said: "I recollect you. You used to collect items for the Tribune." Tothers I may be a newspaperman but back home I am an item collector.

The salary as a small town reporter was $5 a week, and I'll never forget the jackass bray of our printer when I told him a reporter by the name of Richard Harding Davis over in New York was making $45 a week.

* * *

My biggest news story was the day Miss Nettie Fink's celluloid comb caught fire from the gas jet in the postoffice. I sent that right off to the big city papers.

THIS HUMAN "TOOL CHEST" MIGHT HAVE BEEN YOU

Human beings, products of evolution, take themselves just as they are, for granted. We have wonderful "tools"; eyes that see, ears that hear, a nose to detect odors good and bad, front teeth to tear our food, back teeth to grind it.

We have small nails, worthless compared to the tiger's claws, although some ladies have used them to advantage.

The hair on our arms runs downward from the elbow to the wrist, upward from the elbow to the shoulder. Thus, when our hairy ancestors folded their long arms over their heads, the hair shed the rain.

Eyebrows keep perspiration from injuring our eyes. We have all these things, and never think of them.

We might have had many other useful tools to work with, man might, in fact, have been a regular tool box, such as your little boy will get for Christmas.

One arm might have had a shovel at the end to be used as the ant eater uses his heavy claws for digging. One might have had saw teeth, for cutting, another claws, like the lobster, another a sharp, savage pick, to crush in the skull of an enemy.

Professor Thevenin says that even if we had all these things, we wouldn't have as complete a tool outfit as the insects have. They possess "every arm and every tool necessary for their existence."

However, don't feel humble about it, or bow a low bow when you see an ant or grasshopper.

While you haven't all these tools attached to your body, you have in your brain the power to make tools ten thousand times more wonderful.

You couldn't carry around a steam shovel. But you can MAKE IT.

You couldn't carry a flying machine or a submarine, but you can make them, and fly or dive in them.

You are, as the Bible said, "fearfully and wonderfully made," and if you do not praise the Lord in consequence, it's ingratitude.

THEY CALL THIS "SAVAGE DANCING"

Passing rapidly from Professor Thevenin's idea of what human beings MIGHT have been, let us investigate what they ARE. The pictures of "dancing girls" published here are enlightening. The so-called savage dancers, "Hula-Hula" girls from Hawaii, we call savage.

And the AMERICAN WEEKLY, which you will get tomorrow with the Boston Sunday Advertiser, can do anything that it makes up its mind to do, although it isn't Japanese.

It has made up its mind to bring together each Sunday everything that is Wonderful, Strange, Dangerous, Exciting, Unbelievable, yet True, Scientific and Educational.

And it does all that.
